TWO SUSPECTS IN M'PHERSON CASE ARE SEEN

U. S. Investigators Piece Out Reconstruction of Slaying.

ROW SAID TO HAVE PRECEDED MURDER

Visitor Who Fled Through Window Is Accounted Innocent in Death.

INQUIRY ON POLICE MAY END IN FIASCO

Investigation by Senate Is Likely to Await Trial of Case.

Like the chemical action which brings into being, slowly at first, but with increasing speed, an image upon the cloudy, opaque surface of a photographic plate, the investigation by agents of the Department of Justice is developing a picture of the story of the tragic fate of Mrs. Virginia Hurley McPherson.

True, the "plate" upon which the department is working has been fogged badly during the three weeks which have elapsed since the pretty young nurse was found, strangled with the knotted cord of her pajamas, upon the floor of her apartment in the Park Lane, so that it is more difficult to separate the high lights from the shadows, but the image is there, nevertheless, the investigators say.

No effort will be made by the Federal sleuths to interpret the picture, or "fix" the negative, until its development is completed with the accumulation of every scrap of evidence or information which the agents of the Bureau of Investigation of the Department of Justice can find.

Day and Night Inquiry.

Day and night the investigators are at work. Yesterday was a day of rest for most Washingtonians, but for the Department of Justice it was just another day in which more than a dozen vital witnesses were interrogated. And there are still nearly 100 witnesses to be heard, not counting possible others, whose connection with the McPherson murder mystery may be indicated to the agents at some future stage of their probe.

But while the Department of Justice itself is determined not to speculate on conclusions until its work of searching for facts is completed, the definite outline of a graphic solution of the mystery already is becoming visible.

Here is what it is believed to show:

On the evening of September 12, Virginia McPherson had a caller in her apartment on the second floor of the Park Lane. This caller was a man, an old and rather intimate friend, although it is possible that their friends suspected nothing more than a casual acquaintanceship.

Sends for Refreshments.

During the evening, Virginia McPherson telephoned to a drug store and ordered refreshments, including two drinks—an orangeade and a glass of milk.

Some time later, while her first caller was still in the apartment, Virginia McPherson had another visitor. This second arrival also was a man, and also on intimate terms with the girl.

He insisted upon being admitted to the apartment, and on entering, found the other man there. There were words between the two, according to testimony of witnesses, already made public, who told of hearing the voices of two men in Virginia McPherson's apartment that night.

During the altercation, the first man, realizing that he should not become involved in an argument late at night in the apartment of a married woman, fled from the apartment to avoid a scene that was rapidly threatening to develop into a scandal. Finding the doorway blocked by the second visitor, this first man, standing not upon the order of his going, fled through the window and was the man whom Policeman Robert J. Allen saw escaping that way.

Murder Is Reconstructed.

The second man thereupon began to "bawl out" Virginia McPherson, but at last turned to leave, whereupon the girl prepared to retire. But before passing through the doorway the man returned for one more parting, angry remark. Seeing the beautiful girl there, partially disrobed, he was overcome by a sudden emotion and seized her pajama cord and knotted it about her throat. He also then fled through the door and to the street.

That there was plenty of time for the girl to disrobe in the brief interval while the man was gathering up his hat and coat and moving toward the door and then back into the apartment again is proved by the fact that the girl, garbed in modern attire, can slip out of a dress

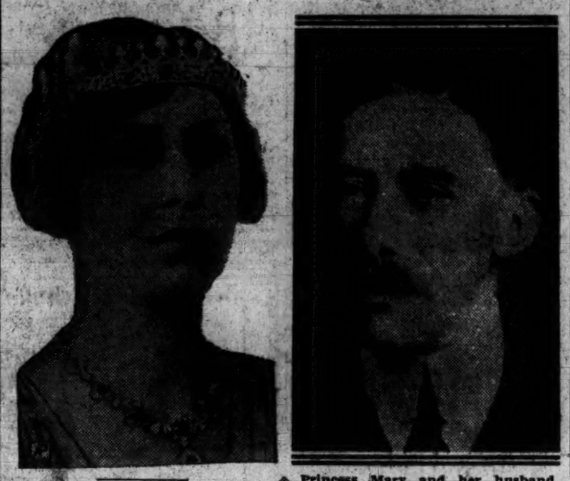
Earl of Harewood, 83, Is Claimed by Death



Princess Mary and her husband, Viscount Lascelles, who now becomes the new Earl of Harewood by the death of his father.

Husband of Princess Mary, Viscount Lascelles Succeeds

Harewood, England, Oct. 6 (A.P.).—The Earl of Harewood, father-in-law of Princess Mary, died at his ancestral estate here today.

He was 83 years old.

Viscount Lascelles becomes Earl of Harewood and his wife now will bear the title of Princess Mary, countess of Harewood. Both sons and his daughter were with the earl when he died but Princess Mary was at her home, Goldsborough Hall, Knaresborough. The earl owned about 29,700 acres.

Sir Francis had an adventurous career as the first minister of Great Britain at Kabul. During the severe fighting in that capital last February his legation, although under fire, became a refuge for most of the foreign colony. He directed the evacuation of foreign residents by transport airplanes from India and was credited with saving the lives of former King Amanullah and his court.

ALLEN ON HIS BEAT IS GLAD TO BE BACK

Policeman Is Recognized by Many as He Makes His Patrlo.

IS PUT IN NEW PRECINCT

Policeman Robert J. Allen, who was suspended from the Metropolitan police force when he launched an independent investigation into the mysterious death of Mrs. Virginia McPherson after the young woman had been declared a suicide by his superior officers, was back on a "beat" last night and declared he was "glad to be back."

The patrolman's suspension was lifted Saturday by the District Commissioners and he was transferred from the Third Precinct to the Eighth Precinct, where he reported for duty yesterday afternoon.

When Sergt. L. D. Redman cried "roll call" about 3:20 o'clock yesterday afternoon Patrolman Allen had not arrived at the Eighth Precinct station between Ninth and Tenth streets on U street. The night shift of policemen had hardly gathered for their orders, however, before Allen, neatly dressed in his freshly pressed uniform, entered the station and inquired at the desk where the roll call was being held. Told that "they were upstairs" he sprightly ascended the stairs two steps at a time and reported for duty. He was not late, however, as his hours are from 4 p. m. to midnight.

With the other officers, he came down a few minutes later, and after "turning in" his address, telephone number, badge number and revolver number, he strolled to his new beat from Seventeenth to Fourteenth and S to Euclid streets.

Allen was warmly received by his fellow officers, and several of them greeted him by name.

On his beat, the young policeman was recognized and greeted by many pedestrians and motorists as he strolled along, swinging his night stick in a carefree manner. Before completing his first turn along S street from Seventeenth to Fourteenth street, he was called upon to direct a tourist party to the Fred-

NEW HAWAII QUAKE CAUSES STAMPEDE

Violent Temblor Throws Movie Crowd Into Panic and Damages Homes.

SPEND NIGHT IN OPEN

Hilo, T. H., Oct. 6 (A.P.).—The severest shock of the present series of seismic disturbances shook the Island of Hawaii late last night, stampeding patrons of a motion picture into a panic and breaking dishes on pantry shelves of Hilo housewives. No one was injured and no serious damage was reported. Prof. Thomas Jagger said he believed the shock was probably the last and most serious of the temblors.

Residents of the village of Holualoa said the quake, which occurred at 10:20 p. m., was "500 per cent worse" than any preceding. Furniture was toppled over, water tanks were burst, a stone wall was flung over and several persons reported foundations of their houses were displaced. Many residents took to the streets to ride aimlessly about in motor cars.

Hilo shopkeepers, keeping late hours, fled from their stores along with their patrons, many spending the night in Mooheau Park. Rumors of a lava flow in the Kona district were unverified.

Soldiers at a camp near the Kilauea crater said there was a tremendous shock but reported no damage. They said there was no activity in the Halemaumau pit of the crater.

Wave Capsizes Boat, Drowning Two Aboard

Newport, Oreg., Oct. 6. (A.P.).—At least two men were drowned late yesterday when the troller Rustler capsized while crossing the bar here. The body of George Robinson, master, was washed ashore while the body of Ike Robinson was believed by coast guards to be trapped within the sunken vessel.

The owner was unable to say whether there were others on board. a Coast Guard surf boat reached the sunken vessel too late to be of assistance.

Cult Princess Found Buried At Side of Seven Pet Dogs

Body of Girl, 19, Who Died After Weird Rites of "Baking in Oven" Had Been Held Year in Hope of "Resurrection."

Los Angeles, Oct. 6 (A.P.).—A sealed casket containing the body of Willa Rhoads 19-year-old foster daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Rhoads, was discovered today by police who excavated under the floor of the couple's suburban home. A second casket contained the mummified bodies of seven puppies.

With the finding of the bodies was unraveled the weird rites of a religious cult of which the girl was the purported "princess." Police said members of the organization, the "Divine Order of the Royal Arm of the Great Seal," preserved the body of the girl with spices and ice for more than a year in the hope she would be resurrected.

The investigation which culminated with the discovery of the caskets followed the arrest of Mrs. Atis Blackburn, self-styled head of the cult, and her daughter, Mrs. Ruth Angling Wieland, both of whom are held on charges of fraudulently obtaining $50,000 from various persons on behalf of the cult. The inquiry was begun at the request of Clifford R. Dabney, wealthy oil operator of Venice, Calif., who charged Mrs. Blackburn obtained $40,000 from him. Dabney said he was once a member of the cult.

Dabney, explaining he became a member of the organization in 1924, said the colony based its beliefs on a book, to be known as "the sixth seal," which was being written by Mrs. Blackburn. Police said "healing rites" described by Dabney as being

COURTS URGED BY TAFT TO AID IN CRIME DRIVE

Says Commission Hoover Named Is Inspiration for Call.

DEMAND BY PUBLIC FOR REFORM SEEN

Chief Justice Spokesman for Circuit Judges Convening Here.

DRY CASES MAJOR CLASS ON DOCKETS

Congress Will Be Requested to Expedite Procedure by Statutes.

(Associated Press.)

Chief Justice Taft, in behalf of the annual conference of circuit judges, over which he presided, issued a statement yesterday calling on Federal courts throughout the country to ead in accomplishing the reforms which President Hoover hopes will result from the work of his law enforcement commission, headed by former Attorney General George W. Wickersham.

The Chief Justice warned the public that it must not ook for too rapid improvement in law enforcement. He said:

"The conference greatly rejoices at the urgent demand by the public generally for more efficiency, more speed and more certainty in the prosecution of the genera crimlina law, which has led to the appointment by the President of a great commission for the discussion and sloption of new methods, and a greater efficiency and dispatch in the consideration and prosecution of crime. The Federal system for the punishment of violations of the Federal criminal stautes offers an opportunity to the Federal courts to lead in the matter of this reform. Congress has been engaged in the last few years in stiffening the prosecution of vioations of Federal criminal laws and in rendering more efficient the procedure in such cases. but the working out of these changes is necessarily sow, and we must not look for too rapid improvement. Much remains to be done in this regard."

Expediting of Cases to be Urged.

The conference will ask Congress to provide that all criminal cases shall be expedited as soon as they reach a circuit court of appeals, and be heard not later than the session following that in which they are filed.

Notwithstanding the work of the Federal courts to prevent congestion, the conference found that during the year there had been no diminution in the number of cases, due to the large number of prohibition prosecutions.

On June 30, last, there were pending in the Federal courts 149,033 cases, compared with 147,142 a year previous, of which 31,500 were criminal, compared with 30,375 a year pievious. The largest single class of cases are those under the prohibition law, of which 11,237 civil and 56,786 criminal were brought during the year ending June 30 last, compared with 9,928 civil and 55,729 criminal during the previous year.

A large part of the increase in civil cases was attributed to conditions along the Canadian border in condemnation proceedings of land for government use and to suits arising out of the war.

Only One District Behind.

The conference found that all of the circuit courts throughout the country, with the exception of the Sixth, clean up each year all cases brought before them, and the conference states that the Sixth, with its judges restored to health and with

Fall Held Too Ill For Trial Today

Attorneys Will Seek Delay Until Wednesday or Thursday.

(Associated Press.)

Wilton J. Lambert, attorney for Albert B. Fall, announced last night that the ill health of the former Interior Secretary would prevent his appearance today for trial on bribery charges growing out of the Elk Hills, Calif., oil reserve lease.

Postponement until Wednesday or Thursday will be asked by Fall's counsel in the District of Columbia Supreme Court.

Fall's health is considered by his physician, Dr. H. T. Safford, who accompanied him from El Paso, Tex., as not immediately dangerous. The doctor believes, however, that the bronchial attack suffered Wednesday by the central figure in the oil cases has left him in such a weakened condition that further exposure would not be safe until recovery is complete.

NAVAL PARLEY INVITATIONS FROM BRITISH GOVERNMENT GO TO FOUR POWERS TODAY

Announcement Is Made After Conference in Rapidan Camp.

GATHERING IS CALLED FOR LATE IN JANUARY

Wording of Proposals Is to Be Made Known on Wednesday.

KID GLOVES REQUIRED FOR PARIS AND ROME

Stimson and Others Join in Long Discussion; Course Believed Decided On.

By CARLISLE BARGERON.

Madison, Va., Oct. 6.—Invitations to the five-power naval limitations conference in London, to be held the third week in January, will go forward tomorrow, it was announced today at the Rapidan mountain retreat of President Hoover and the retreat also, for the present, of Premier MacDonald of Great Britain.

Invitations will be sent to the United States, France, Italy and Japan by the British government.

The form that they will take, and which is quite important, will be made public Wednesday.

Announcement of this came rapidly on the heels of published reports that there seemed to be some hitch about the issuance of the invitations. The fact that no one in either the British or the American delegations had been able to forecast when the invitations would go forward had excited some comment.

Delicate Handling Required.

It is a matter of some delicacy, of course, this issuance of the invitations, because of the way in which France and Italy have responded to naval limitation gestures in the past, and the manner in which they have received recent negotiations between Mr. Hoover and Premier MacDonald.

Such a delicate matter it is, in fact, that when the British premier submitted the draft copies of the invitations this Government had the reference to the cruiser agreement or proposal of the United States and Great Britain eliminated.

It is a matter of conjecture as to whether the published reports that a hitch had developed in the issuance of the invitations caused the announcement today. If this be the case then it may be that they are going forward to the interested governments without any definite assurance as to how they will be received.

Form Appears Most Important.

It is a fact that as late as Friday night Premier MacDanold was not prepared to say, at least he would not say, when the invitations were going forward. And there are indications, too, that Mr. Hoover did not intend to have his Rapidan trip disturbed by any announcements, that is, announcements such as the definite date when the invitations should be issued.

Therefore considerable importance will attach to the form which the invitations are revealed to have taken when they are made public Wednesday. For example, if it should develop that little or no mention is made in the invitations as to the definite purpose of the conference—if the invitations, instead, are so worded as to be but a call for the five nations to get together to talk over their difficulties, to endeavor to get together on ways and means to bring about everlasting peace without specifically saying that the conference has to do with the limitation of naval armaments, then a decidedly different light would be thrown on the forthcoming parley. It would emphasize, indeed, the problem that the United States and Great Britain are up against in getting France and Italy to agree to their idealistic program. This is not to suggest, of course, that much good

MAN AND WOMAN END LIVES IN CITY

Former, 63, Hangs Himself After Row With Wife, According to Police.

LATTER DIES BY POISON

An elderly man and a young woman ended their lives yesterday after giving warning that they intended to commit suicide.

Arthur I. Welland, 63-years-old, of Rhode Island avenue, near North Capitol street, hanged himself with a piece of cord hitched over an open door. Mrs. Lottie Clark, 33-years-old, of B street, near Sixth street, southwest, died at Emergency Hospital after swallowing poison.

Welland's act followed threats that he would kill himself, police said. The woman consumed her fatal potion after making a similar threat because of the failure of her husband to find work, police were told.

Welland's act followed a quarrel with his wife, Mrs. Alice Welland, according to Eighth Precinct police, who investigated the tragedy. Mrs. Welland told police that he had threatened to commit suicide on Saturday, and predicted that this would be the last day he would be seen alive. Mrs. Welland said, that following this threat, she took the precaution of hiding all the knives in the house.

During the breakfast hour yesterday the elderly couple quarreled over some property that they jointly owned, it was learned. In the midst of the quarrel Welland went to his bedroom and locked the door. Mrs. Welland remained in the kitchen to wash dishes. About 40 minutes later she went to the living room to see the ghastly sight of her husband hanging from the door.

A thin piece of cord was tied to the doorknob, slung over the top of the door and noosed about the man's neck. He had strangled himself by squatting on the floor, allowing the cord to tighten around his throat.

Mrs. Welland rushed to a nearby drug store and summoned a clerk, who cut the cord. The rescue squad and Emergency Hospital ambulance were called, but first aid proved to be futile. The man was pronounced dead by Dr. Baber, of Emergency Hospital.

Mrs. Clark was reported to have been despondent over the failure of her husband, a painter, to get work. Shortly before midnight yesterday she left the bedroom where she had been discussing the trouble with her husband, entered the bathroom and swallowed the poison. She died yesterday morning at Emergency Hospital.

Coroner Ramsay J. Nevitt issued certificates of suicide in both cases.

UKASE ON TARIFF GIVEN BY SIMMONS

G. O. P. Must Give Up Flexible Proviso if It Wants Bill, Democrat Asserts.

ACTION IS STRATEGIC

Senate Democrats yesterday told the Republican leaders that the latter must accept elimination of the flexible provision of the pending Hawley-Smoot bill or there will be no tariff bill enacted.

This was the substance of a statement issued by Senator Simmons (Democrat), North Carolina, Democratic leader in the tariff fight, and supported by informal declarations from members of the insurgent Republican group which recently cooperated with the Democrats to defeat the provision giving the President authority to make flexible tariff rate changes.

Simmons' statement answered reports that Republican leaders plan to reinsert the flexible tariff powers of the Executive when the bill goes to conference, and then force the

CONGRESS TO HEAR M'DONALD AT NOON

Luncheon at White House and President's Dinner Fill Formal Program.

LONGWORTHS TO DODGE

Refreshed by a week-end rest in President Hoover's camp on the Rapidan River in the Virginia mountains, Premier Ramsay MacDonald is expected to return with the President and other guests to the Capital about 10:30 o'clock this morning. The party is scheduled to depart from the camp at 7:30 o'clock.

The Prime Minister of Great Britain will go to the Capitol at noon and will address both the Senate and the House members in the latter's chamber in his first public talk in America. He will be introduced by Vice President Curtis. Sir Esme Howard will accompany the Labor leader to Congress.

Immediately after this address Mr. MacDonald will be the guest of President Hoover at a luncheon in the White House. His afternoon will be open, and he will probably make some informal calls on friends in the Capital.

The largest dinner of the Hoover administration to date is scheduled for 8 o'clock tonight when 90 guests will honor the British statesman and his daughter, Ishbel. Prominent State officials and Charles Evans Hughes, former Secretary of State; former Secretary of State Frank B. Kellogg, and John W. Davis, former Ambassador to the Court of St. James, will be among the distinguished personages at the dinner.

The Speaker of the House and Mrs. Nicholas Longworth have declined to attend the affair, it was stated authoritatively yesterday. It was believed that this refusal came as a

Dry Agent and Sheriff's Aid Both Killed in Duel

Former's Charge of "Standing in With Bootleggers" Arouses Wrath of Texas Deputy, Who Kills Accuser and Is Mortally Wounded.

Nacogdoches, Texas, Oct. 6 (A.P.).—Believing his honor as an officer had been questioned by Federal Prohibition Agent L. Chance, Deputy Sheriff Claude King avenged the supposed insult with a ready pistol today and Chance replied in kind. Using the office of Sheriff Eugene Turner as the dueling ground, they shot it out. Chance falling dead instantly under the fire of King, who died a few hours later after an unsuccessful operation.

But for the inopportune ring of a telephone in an anteroom, Turner might have averted the gun play and at least would have been able to say how Chance answered King's challenge, "I hear you've been saying some pretty hard things about me." Just as the sheriff left the office he heard the shots.

King had been informed that Chance, a deputy prohibition officer, had charged him with "standing in" with local bootleggers and being too lenient with them.

Turner was sitting talking to Chance, he said, when King walked in. As the 33-year-old deputy accosted Chance, the sheriff ordered them to stop quarreling, saying, "You can't do that in here." At that moment he got up to answer the telephone. There were no witnesses and whether the Federal officer denied that he had been speaking ill of King probably never will be known.

King, critically wounded, walked 50 feet from the office to the automobile that bore him to the hospital.

might not come of even such a parley as this.

Neither is it a known fact that the announcement that the invitations were to go forward Monday had not originally been held back for today. It may be, indeed, that the pessimistic reports and the announcement were merely a coincidence.

At any rate, it would seem that much "heavy stuff" concerning the nations of the world was talked over today. For one thing, Joseph P. Cotton, Undersecretary of State and an active mind, though comparatively young, was called into the deliberations today. He came down to the camp and was one of those present at what might be called a general conference.

This was a conference in one of the log cabins that compose Mr. Hoover's mountain retreat and was attended by Mr. Hoover, Mr. MacDonald, Sir Robert Van Sittart, the premiers' secretary, Secretary of State Stimson, and R. I. Craigie, in charge of the American division of the British foreign office.

Something Done, Is Belief.

This conference suggests more than a mere abstract discussion of international problems such as Mr. Hoover and Mr. MacDonald were represented as discussing last night. There was no log fire, no whistling of the trees and no smoking of cigars and pipes, with a spirited brook rushing nearby, to give it the picture of two men simply meditating and swapping thought. The inescapable conclusion is that something was done at this conference, that some conclusion was reached.

It is unlikely that it had to do with the cruiser problem between this country and Great Britain. The two governments have already come as close as they can on this matter and they have come close enough to be willing to go into a general conference on it. They came within 30,000 tons of actual agreement several weeks ago, and Mr. Hoover and Mr. MacDonald in their mountain retreat, far removed from naval experts and naval technicians, and all like that, could hardly come any closer than that.

The best guess in the light of events is that the conference had to do with the form that the invitations to the other three powers will take.

Not Acting in Concert.

Both Mr. Hoover and the British premier have done everything in their power to dissipate any suggestion that the American and British governments are acting in concert to force the other three governments into an agreement. Their explanation is that manifestly there had to be an agreement between the two countries on the cruiser problem before there could be any possibility of a successful five-power conference.

To this end the "party," so to speak, was turned over to Premier MacDonald. He will be the sponsor of the conference. An invitation will come to the United States just as invitations will be received by France, Italy and Japan. But the fact remains that this country has been "in" on the wording of the invitations, that it has had the counsel of Great Britain in the issuance of them, and that it has had the right of approval or rejection.

400 Marines on Guard.

Mr. Hoover and Mr. MacDonald had plenty of time for talk today. Their place, a most pretentious one but pocketed in most primeval surroundings, is shut out from the outside world by Marines. There are probably 400 of them, or rather 400 Marines or engineers, who are still working to make Mr. Hoover comfortable.

Early in the day, after the premier and the President had gotten the sleep out of their eyes, the sleep that comes with a racy, noisy stream and the sweep of the lofty pines, and after they had had breakfast, Mr. Hoover a cigar and the premier his consoling pipe, the two of them walked down to where one rushing stream runs into another to form Rapidan Creek, and there they sat on a log. The scene, in fact, the whole surroundings of their stay at the camp, has been conducive to thought, and it is quite probable that their minds opened up.

Mrs. Hoover and Miss Ishbell, the daughter of the premier, went horseback riding in the morning. They borrowed two horses from the Marines, and attired in mountain riding clothes, they worked their way through the wending paths of the mountainside, paths so shrouded in overgrowth that they often had to push it aside.

Party Hikes in Afternoon.

In the afternoon, the entire party went a-hiking, that is the President, the premier, the ladies of the party and everybody. They went up to the observation point, a mountain crest 500 feet above the 2,500 foot elevation of the camp. Here they could see the birthplaces of three of America's earlier Presidents, Jefferson, Madison, and James Monroe, not that the gentlemen were born within a stone's throw of each other, but such is the visibility of the observation point.

It is a question, too, as to whether they did not run into the President's neighbors up there—the Burrakers—old man Burraker, his wife and six children, one of whom, it will be remembered, sold the President a 'possum for $5, and thereby started a presidential educational movement in the mountain country.

If they did meet—and it could not be ascertained definitely, because Mr. Hoover is so sensitive about this incident—the MacDonalds should have felt at home, because the mountain people speak with a strong Scotch twang.

It might be said, too, that during the day the President introduced Mr. MacDonald to his style of religious worship. The President is a Quaker, and before he was elected was a quite frequent attendant at one or the other of the two Quaker meeting houses in Washington. He attended regularly the meeting house on I street just after he was elected, then he began spending his Sundays at his mountain retreat. The first one or two of these he attended a small Virginia church nearby.

Self-Communion His Way.

Then he talked with some 10,000 people of the countryside one day at Madison and told them of the religion that comes to a man who sits quietly by a mountain fishing stream and communes with himself. It is then that he escapes his thoughts, he explained then that he gets away from the practical world and looks in upon his inner self. It is then that he views the grandeur of nature and receives assurance that there is some One bigger than any mundane influence, something that rules over all the world.

Since revealing his philosophy on this occasion, Mr. Hoover has been practicing it. He has not been to church since.

Mr. Hoover and the Premier plan to leave the camp with their party about 7 o'clock tomorrow morning. They will reach Washington about 10 o'clock.

QUAI WATCHES VISIT FOR U-BOAT ACCORD

Paris Expected to Accept London Invitation, but Wants Cards Face Up.

LE TEMPS IS SKEPTICAL

Paris, Oct. 6 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—France will in all probability accept the invitation to a five-power naval parley which, Washington dispatches state, will be issued by London Monday. In doing so this country is expected to express its understanding that the conference will be a continuation of the adjourned Washington conference.

Questions of general disarmament and all questions outside a strict naval limitation program, the French answer will indicate as being already under discussion by the League of Nations.

Belief prevails here that President Hoover and Premier MacDonald will not take any definite stand respecting submarines as that would assure opposition to the projected conference from the other three powers.

Wants Cards on Table.

Before the five-power parley is convened France would first like to have a precise idea of the character of the understanding between Great Britain and the United States and whether it is confined to questions of warships and cruisers or whether the two biggest nations are to go into the conference with a prior agreement which would affect other participants in the deliberations; notably, whether they would have a fixed program for the abolition of submarines.

The same reasoning is reported to be affecting the Italians and while the French and Italians have not made common cause, because France is unwilling to accept naval parity between herself and Italy, both countries are waiting to see what comes of MacDonald's visit before they engage themselves to accept or refuse invitations to the projected five-power conference.

"Mysticism, Not Politics."

As is usual in such circumstances, Le Temps indicates the tone of thought at the Quai D'Orsay, saying tonight that MacDonald's voyage seems to be an act of faith and asks what he really expects to get from it. Commenting on the British Premier's New York speech and the reference in it to the spiritual power behind the two great Anglo-Saxon nations Le Temps says:

"This is mysticism, not politics" and goes on to express the opinion that it is mere words as between two modern nations bound by economic necessities.

As Le Temps interprets MacDonald's trip, the British premier is in America to obtain Anglo-Saxon cooperation in all questions, including peace, "not exactly an entente nor an alliance; but the closest cooperation under the dominion of the spiritual bonds of two peoples having a strong affinity. First we must see how that works out."

MacDonald may have put aside material purposes, says Le Temps, but "Americans, who understand how to conciliate idealism with necessities, are not susceptible to word magic."

FRENCH FLIERS LAND SAFELY IN MANCHURIA

The French Foreign Office in Paris yesterday announced it had received confirmation of the landing of Dieudonne Coste (right) and Maurice Bellonte (left) in the region of Tsitsikher, northwest of Harbin, in Manchuria, on September 29. The French fliers recently took off from Le Bourget Field for an unannounced destination.

NEW FLIGHT RECORD CLAIMED FOR COSTE

Paris Air Ministry Thinks Frenchman Has Beaten Italy 1,000 Miles.

ALIGHTED SEPTEMBER 29

Paris, Oct. 6 (A.P.).—The air ministry tonight claimed a new world record for airplane distance flight in a straight line for Dieudonne Coste and Maurice Bellonte. Advices received by the ministry and the foreign office said the aviators who left Le Bourget Air Field early on the morning of September 27 had landed on September 29 in good condition in the vicinity of Tsitsihar, northwest of Harbin, Manchuria.

Unofficial estimates of the distance covered by the red Breguet sesquiplane, without having details of the complete route followed, ranged from 5,500 miles to nearly 6,000.

The French aviators thus appeared to have set a record at least 1,000 miles greater than that which the Italians, Artruro Ferrarin and Carlo del Prete established in July, 1928, by a flight of 4,475 miles from a point near Rome to a beach ten miles north of Natal, Brazil.

The official dispatches received here this evening set at rest the fears for the safety of the fliers which steadily had been increasing during the past week.

41 Planes in Tour Land at Montreal

Injury to Woman's Hand at Ottawa Only Mishap of Day's Flying.

Montreal, Oct. 6 (A.P.).—A fleet of 41 airplanes, the contestants and guest ships in the 5,000-mile national air tour through Canada and the United States, landed at St. Hubert Airport here this afternoon after a hop from Ottawa.

Earlier in the day the aviators had hopped off from Toronto for Ottawa. They reported the day's flying was marred by only one mishap. In landing at Ottawa Miss May Haizlip, of Kansas City, one of the contestants, was struck on the left hand by a small unidentified object and the second carpal bone was fractured.

At the time of the impact Miss Haizlip was reaching to press back her goggles and her hand probably prevented serious injury to her eyes. The fliers will leave Canada tomorrow in a hop to Portland, Me.

Child Is Hurt as Auto Runs Into Car Ahead

Three-year-old Marion Dodd, daughter of Earl T. Dodd, of Alexandria, Va., was injured seriously yesterday afternoon when she was thrown through the windshielf of the automobile her father was operating when it mashed into the rear of a machine operated by Irving S. Hudson, 25 years old, of 939 Massachusetts avenue northwest, on the Highway Bridge. Police reported that Dodd was dividing his attention at the time of the accident between driving the machine and viewing several airplanes near by.

The child was removed to Emergency Hospital, where Dr. I. Rutkoski diagnosed the injuries as a possible concussion of the brain and several minor cuts on the fact and head. Her condition is critical.

Dead Star Wore Fortune in Gems

Rings and Necklaces Held Worth $350,000 Found on Jeanne Eagels.

New York, Oct. 6 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—When Jeanne Eagles, stage and screen star, hurriedly left her apartment at 1143 Park avenue shortly before 8 o'clock last Thursday night to go to Park Avenue Hospital, where she died, she wore jewelry valued, according to a police estimate, at $350,000.

This was revealed today in a check-up of the property, taken to the East Sixty-seventh street police station to be turned over, in turn, to the public administrator. Following Miss Eagels' death, Detectives Thomas McGuire and Cornelius Connelly notified police headquarters, and Policeman Brady was detailed to remain with the body.

Miss Eagles wore a six-carat diamond ring valued at $20,000 on her left hand. The diamond is oblong in shape, and set in platinum. She also wore a pearl ring, said by police to be worth between $25,000 and $30,000, and a wedding ring set with seven diamonds, together with a white-gold guard ring. There also were two strands of pearls, one of 59 and the other of 52 pearls, graduated and fastened with a diamond clasp.

Woman Is Quizzed In Holdup of Hotel

Chicago, Oct. 6 (A.P.).—After hiding her identity during three days of police grilling, a young woman who attempted a jewel robbery in a fashionable South Shore district hotel Thursday, tonight told police she was Joan La Coste, holder fo the world's automobile speed record for women. She said she had driven her car 145 miles an hour at Daytona, Fla., in 1926.

Mrs. Rebecca Bobbe overpowered the young woman as she entered the Bobbe apartment and held her until the arrival of police to whom the girl gave the name of Mrs. Jean Rust.

She told police that her "husband, Thomas Rust," sent her up into the apartment building to stage the holdup, but police were skeptical of the story.

EIGHT DIE IN DAY IN PLANE MISHAPS

Ninth, a Pilot in One of Four Accidents, Is Reported as Dying.

ONE WOMAN IS VICTIM

Leona, Tex., Oct. 6 (A.P.).—Lieut. Jack Brooks, Dallas contractor, and three passengers were killed this afternoon the Nash farm, near here, after a wing buckled.

The other dead:

Leon Lynch and Allen Powell, Centerville youths, and Marvin Botter, of Teague.

The wing gave way at an altitude of 1,500 feet, and the ship shot to earth with the disabled wing folded back over the cockpit. The nose of the ship was buried deep in the earth.

Girl Passeger Victim.

Moberly, Mo., Oct. 6 (A.P.).—Two passengers were killed and the pilot probably fatally injured here late today when the airplane in which they were riding crashed in a cornfield near the local airport. All three lived here. The dead—Miss Deldee Hardin, about 25 years old; Paul Rowland, about 25. The injured—Bryan Heflin, about 35, the pilot.

The cause of the accident was not ascertained. The plane went into a tail spin just before it fell.

Heflin, who has been flying here for a year, advertised his first "circus" for his afternoon. He completed an afternoon of stunting and had carried several passengers aloft before taking up Miss Hardin and Rowland about 5 o'clock. He had said he was a licensed pilot.

Altoona, Pa., Oct. 6 (A.P.).—Baker Diehl, 23, of Duncanville, today was killed at the Cross Keys Airport when he struck the ground as his parachute failed to open after a jump from an altitude of 3,000 feet. Diehl's regular summer schedule of parachute exhibitions ended last week. He went up today to thrill 1,000 persons gathered at the airport because of the fine weather.

Catholics Hold Field Mass as Memorial

Catholics of nearby Virginia, Maryland and Washington participated in a field mass at 11 o'clock yesterday morning 14 miles north of Fredericksburg, Va., on the Jefferson Davis highway at the site of the first English-speaking Catholic settlement in America, where the Catholic Woman's Club of Virginia proposes to plant a memorial cross to honor the early members of their faith.

The mass was celebrated by the Rev. Joseph Brennan, pastor of the Catholic Church at Fredericksburg, beside graves of members of the Brent family who were reported in history to have crossed into Virginia from Maryland in 1647 to make their homes. Each of the graves were blessed on this occasion by Dr. Joseph Magri, historian of the Catholic diocese of Richmond.

OPPOSITION TO FARM BOARD IS DEPLORED

Administration Leaders Try to Assure Confirmation by Senators.

WILLIAMS IS DEFENDED

(Associated Press.)

Efforts will be made by administration leaders before the Senate agriculture committee meets this week to dispel the opposition which has developed to Carl Williams, of Oklahoma, and Sam R. McKelvie, of Nebraska, as members of the Federal Farm Board representing, respectively, cotton and wheat.

Unless the leaders can obtain enough support to prevent a coalition of the wheat and cotton groups, they admitted confirmation of the two board members could be blocked if a real effort were made to do so.

Senator Smith, Democrat, of South Carolina, upon whom many senators lean for advice on cotton matters, is leading the opposition to Williams and Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, opposes McKelvie's confirmation because he feels he does not have a wide range view of the wheat farmers' difficulties.

Opposition to Others Likely.

Opposition to some other members of the board also seems certain to develop on the floor, but no considerable group is held at this time to favor rejection of either Chairman Legge or any member other than Williams and McKelvie. Although silent himself, Senator Brookhart (Republican), of Iowa, is expected by some senators to assail Legge's confirmation.

Administration leaders have sought to determine whether cotton and wheat State senators are combining and have weighed the strength of such a coalition. A number of Western senators who have disapproved of the board's failure to stabilize wheat, including Senators Frazier, of North Dakota, and Norbeck, of South Dakota, Republicans, have indicated they would not oppose the confirmation of any board member.

Some interest is manifest in the probable position of Senators Norris and Howell, of Nebraska, on the confirmation of McKelvie. Although a member of the Senate agriculture committee, Norris was not present during the examination of board members. Neither Norris nor Howell, however, have said whether they would engage actively in the debate over McKelvie in the Senate.

Williams' Statement Assailed.

Opposition to Williams is based by Senator Smith on the board member's declaration before the Senate committee that cotton, under present conditions of supply and demand, should bring 1 cent to 1¼ cents more than it is, or around 18½ cents.

Senator Smith termed this an "outrageous declaration," because the average price since 1919 was 22½ cents, and he said cotton should be bringing a better price because the average American production during the present decade has been less than the average demand.

The position is taken by Senator Thomas (Democrat), of Oklahoma. Williams' sponsor, that the board member's testimony was misunderstood. He said he would ask Williams to send a written statement to the Senate committee to appear in person to clarify his position.

Chairman McNary expects to call his committee Wednesday, if the transcript of last week's hearings is printed by that time. Unless the hearings are reopened for Williams, a report to the Senate on confirmation will be voted upon at that time.

Havana Will Erect $2,000,000 Stadium

Downtown Structure Will Have Seating Capacity of 50,000.

Havana, Oct. 6 (A.P.).—A $2,000,000 stadium, with a seating capacity of 50,000, will be built within a short distance of Havana's downtown district, and is to open February, 1930. A concession was signed today by the Cuban Sanitation Department.

The stadium, will be built and operated by private interests, but after 20 years it is to become the property of the government. Reports that the concession had been signed brought protests from Mrs. Maude Barlow, wife of Joseph E. Barlow, American resident of Havana, to the American Embassy. Barlow asserts his title to the Manglar property, where the stadium will be built, in a $9,000,000 claim against the Cuban government now before the State Department.

THRONG AT RITES FOR STRESEMANN

SERVICES IN REICHSTAG

Berlin, Oct. 6. (A.P.).—Gustav Stresemann, foreign minister of the German republic and an outstanding leader in efforts to bring peace and stability to war-torn Europe, today was buried with ceremonies shared in by Germans of all political complexions, except extreme nationalists and communists.

The ruffle of muffled drums and the roar of black streamered airplanes circling above sounded through the great Richstag Square, where 20,000 persons packed every inch of space and waited hours to pay the last honor of the nation to the man who had worn himself out in its service. Dr. Stresemann, when he died suddenly last Thursday, was only 51 years of age and his physicians said he repeatedly had disregarded warnings that his health could not stand the strain of his intensive work.

Today the treetops and even the top of the Great Victory Monument in the square were crowded and the silent mass of humanity on the ground was held close-packed by rows of police in gleaming helmets.

Flowers in Reichstag.

Within the Reichstag the air was heavy with the scent of flowers banked about the bier, which was flanked by tall candles on the raised dais for the president's chair. Uniformed students formed the guard of honor. All members of the legislative body were present, except those of the extreme Right and Left.

Diplomats in their brilliant uniforms were in the balcony beside the former imperial box. The house rose as Frau Stresemann and her two sons entered the box with President Paul von Hindenburg. The latter appeared aged, as he slowly descended the steps. The Berlin Philharmonic Orchestra played the overture "Coriolanus."

The work of Dr. Stresemann raised Germany "from helplessness back to an equal place among nations," said Chancellor Herman Mueller, as he began his eulogy.

Praised by Chancellor.

"Dr. Stresemann will go down in history as the builder of Germany's resurrection. It is our task to continue his work in his spirit. We have lost a great statesman and leader, who, in the words of Goethe, was a man, and that means a fighter."

The funeral cortege was headed by a corps of mounted police, and, following the body on foot, were Stresemann's sons, President von Hindenburg, Sir Eric Drummond, secretary-general of the League of Nations; Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, president of the Reichsbank; Vice President von Kardorff, of the Reichstag, and the entire Diplomatic Corps. Automobiles carried nearly 1,000 mourners, including the mother of Dr. Stresemann and other women relatives.

On the way to the cemetery the procession paused for two minutes in solemn silence below the black-draped window of the former office of Dr. Stresemann above the entrance to the foreign office in Wilhelmstrasse.

Burial-Alive Plot Brings Jail Peril

French Will Prosecute Aid in Hoax Interment at Versailles.

Versailles, France, Oct. 6 (A.P.).—Henri Boulogne, tatooed former convict who confessed last night to obliging Clement Passal, the false Marquis de Champaubert, by burying him alive, will be prosecuted for homicide by imprudence and for what the French code calls illegal possession of the corpse. If convicted of these crimes he risks sentence of two years in prison with a fine of 600 francs.

The police today said other persons implicated in the attempted hoax designed to boost the sales of the memoirs of Passal, swindler with a long record, will be brought to book. The confession was confirmed by other evidence and left little doubt that Passal willingly entered the coffin laid in a shallow grave in a wood near Paris and let his conspirators seal the box and bury it.

According to the statements of Boulogne, Passal died in his voluntary tomb within two days. It was supposed that the rubber tube leading to above ground through which he expected to breathe proved insufficient. The police were led to the discovery of the body by anonymous letters which said that "Knights of Themis" had buried a man alive.

Woman Near Trial For Youth Slaying

Acused of Paying $1,000 for Killing in Plot for Insurance.

Macon, Ga., Oct. 6 (A.P.).—With court preparations indicating attorneys on both sides expect a hotly-waged legal battle, the State of Georgia tomorrow will bring to trial Mrs. J. C. Powers, 71-year-old boarding house operator, charged with instigating the slaying of a youth of 18 in order to collect insurance on his life.

Mrs. Powers awaited trial in the Bibb County Jail cell where she has been held since soon after the body of James W. Parks, a roomer in her home, was found, and Earl Manchester, 19, of Rochester, Minn., confessed he killed his fellow roomer on promise from Mrs. Powers of $1,000 of the $7,000 insurance under which she was beneficiary.

Manchester has been tried and sentenced to death for murder. Mrs. Powers faces trial as accessory before the fact. A special venire of 160 has been summoned.

LINDBERGH SCOUTS MAYA WILDERNESS

Plane Exploration Group Sees Stronghold of Old Western Civilization.

DETAILS LIKELY TODAY

Miami, Fla., Oct. 6 (A.P.).—Flying his amphibian plane symbol of modern civilization, Col. Charles A. Lindbergh today piloted two archaeologists over hitherto unexplored ruins of the ancient civilization of the Mayas in the Central American wilderness between Belize, British Honduras, and Merida, Yucatan.

The flight, according to reporter received here by M. J. Rice, local traffic manager for the Pan-American Airways, started at 10:15 a. m., and landing was made in Merida at 3:45 p. m. Col. Lindbergh was accompanied by Dr. Alfred Kidder and Dr. Oliver Ricketson, Carnegie Institute scientists; Mrs. Lindbergh and a co-pilot. The aerial explorations are sponsored by the Pan-American Airways.

Further trips are planned over Yucatan, Quintana Roo and Chiapas, Mexico; Guatemala and British Honduras. Cozumel Island, off the east coast of Yucatan, and known site of many remains of the Mayan culture, may be made the base for the expedition.

The civilization of the Mayas is generally credited by modern scholars as having been the most advanced on the American continent prior to the coming of the white man, even surpassing that of the Aztecs and Incas. Some experts have said the Mayan culture was ahead of the contemporary European civilization of the "Dark Ages." The Mayan calendar recently has been declared more accurate than the present western calendar and the fine arts of the Mayas, such as painting, sculpture and architecture, have aroused intense interest and admiration among archaeologists.

Exploration has hitherto been handicapped by the dangerous maze of jungles that isolate the Mayan ruins and Col. Lindbergh's flights are in an effort to overcome this ruthless grip of the wilderness and discover more secrets of ancient America.

No details of today's flight were received here, but one radiogram from the expedition to Mr. Rice said "detailed report tomorrow."

Merida, Yucatan, Oct. 6 (A.P.).—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh and his wife were heartily received here today by local authorities and officials when they flew from Belize, British Honduras, on an archaelogical expedition for study of Maya ruins.

The aviator was invited to lunch by Governor Torre Diaz but could not take time from his survey to accept. The party rested here tonight and will return to Belize early tomorrow. Col. and Mrs. Lindbergh were guests at the home of Col. Garza Leal, inspector general of police.

Lindbergh declined to give an interview but it appeared that he planned to fly over the famous Maya ruins of Chichen Itza.

Hyattsville Bridge Hurts Railroader

Morley Chiswell, 40, Struck as He Walks Along Top of Train.

Morley Chiswell, 49 years old, of 3109 Cold Spring avenue, Baltimore, a Baltimore & Ohio railroad freight conductor, was serious injured at 7 o'clock last night when the back of his head struck the arch of the new highway bridge at Hyattsville, Md., while he was walking atop a tank car on a moving B. & O. freight train.

Chiswell was taken by the Hyattsville Fire Department to Casualty Hospital, where his condition last night was declared by Dr. J. Rogers Young to be critical. The man received a possible fracture of the skull and lacerations about the head.

Chiswell was said to have been injured while walking in the opposite direction from which the train was moving, the back of his head striking the under arch of the bridge. The impact threw him to the walkway of the car, where he lay unconscious.

SHOTGUN IS FOUND IN GIRL'S SLAYING

Blood-Stained Weapon Fully Loaded When Discovered by Officers.

HELD AS VALUABLE CLEW

White Plains, N. Y., Oct. 6 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—The discovery of the 16-gauge shotgun with which Mrs. Elsa Marshall was killed led county authorities today to believe that the chances of apprehending her murderer have been materially increased.

The blood-stained weapon, fully loaded, was found within 400 yards of where the girl's body lay in a thicket in Knollwood Manor, Greenburgh. The shells are exactly like those found near the body.

The discovery of the gun came somewhat as a surprise since an almost constant search by dozens of deputies and offer of a reward had failed to find it.

Undersheriff Frank Cherico and another deputy went to the scene of the crime and discovered the gun in a clump of bushes by the side of the road. A thorough canvass of all gun owners in the vicinity is being made in the hope of finding some one who could identify the gun. Police believed this would be easy, since it is an old English model, double-barreled, of a type rarely seen in this country.

The usual procedure of checking the owner through the manufacturer was blocked by the fact that there is no maker's name on the gun. Also, police said, the age of the weapon makes this method difficult since it has probably changed ownership several times since it was purchased some years ago.

FIVE MORE PLANES LOST IN SUBARCTIC

Bleak North Enfolds Would-Be Rescuers of McAlpine Exploring Party.

COLD IS MORE INTENSE

Winnipeg, Manitoba, Oct. 6 (A.P.).—The bleak subarctic stretches of Canada's northwestern prairies today held fast the secret of the fate of seven airplanes, two of them lost for a month and the five others, searching for the first two, unreported for several days.

Only reports of falling temperatures came over the radio from the three bases from which aviators have flown in search of Col. C. D. H. McAlpine and seven companions, who left on a prospecting trip in two airplanes a month ago.

One of the searching planes, piloted by Punch Dickens, widely known airman of the Northwest, has been unheard from for five days. Directors of the search here said no apprehension was felt for Dickens' safety, adding, however, that a companion plane to Dickens' seaplane has been ordered to proceed to Resolution, the radio post where Dickens last reported. This, they explained, was merely a protective measure.

Search directors expressed the belief that the four other planes, unreported for three days, were waiting for more favorable weather before continuing the search. They were believed to be at Baker Lake, off the western shore of Hudson Bay.

Berlin, Oct. 6. (A.P.).—Jewelry valued at $20,000 was stolen from the French Embassy today while Ambassador Pierre de Margerie was attending the funeral of Dr. Gustav Stresemann.

A chauffeur found empty jewel cases in the Embassy garden and detectives then discovered that a writing table in the bedroom of the ambassador had been forced open and a pearl necklace valued at $10,000, a platinum ring and stickpins had been removed. A glass cabinet in the room below also had been pried open and antique gold objects taken.

100 Families Cut Off By Cape Fear Floods

Wilmington, N. C., Oct. 6 (A.P.).—Two dykes on the Cape Fear River in lower Bladen County broke yesterday, inundating 2,000 acres of land and marooning more than 100 families.

Fear that the dykes, which broke during the flood of 1923, would not withstand present flood waters, had caused many residents of the section to evacuate their homes. Calls for help were forwarded to the Red Cross. No loss of life had been reported as rescue efforts went forward.

They Call It Politics

By CARTER FIELD

PLAYING of "Britannia Rules the Waves" by the New York City Police Band as Premier MacDonald was escorted up the Hudson River was very timely, if unintentionally so, according to senators interested in building up an American merchant marine.

At the very moment the band was wafting this complimentary tune amid the deafening din of Mr. MacDonald's welcome, Senator Wesley L. Jones, of Washington, was vainly trying to soften the latest blow tending to make virtually impossible any public support for any plan looking to restoring the American flag to the seas.

This latest blow, struck by Comptroller McCarl, tends to destroy the faith of the country in the integrity of the Shipping Board. It comes on the heels of the Shearer suit, expose and investigation, which latter was suspended during the period of Mr. MacDonald's visit lest the anti-British utterances of Shearer prove embarrassing to the distinguished visitor.

• • • •

BUT just prior to Mr. MacDonald arriving it was being frankly conceded by the American shipbuilders themselves that the Shearer expose would probably result in no warship being built in a private yard for the next ten or fifteen years. So devastating has been the effect on the public of the thtree big shipbuilding yards of the country employing Shearer that the shipbuilders frankly admit there would be a public outcry should any one of them be given a governmental contract in the near future.

Even prior to that Government moves, however sound may have been the reasons for them, and however public spirited may have been the motives, had been hamstringing the plan of the Shipping Board to build up a privately owned merchant marine to take the place of the fleet it had been operating at such a heavy loss.

This had been with respect to the mail contracts. The lines had been started, after the ships were sold, with the understanding that if operated on certain routes specified in the contracts of sale they would be granted mail contracts. But the Postoffice Department in many instances did not approve, not because it objected to these particular ships on these specified runs carrying the mail, but because it did not endorse the stock selling methods of one company, or some other phase or another.

• • • •

THIS situation is still unsettled, with resulting discouragement to those who ha dhoped to see an expansion of American merchant shipping, and with decreasing probabilities of interesting new capital in maritime ventures.

While this is still worrying the ship owners and operators, and naturally also the ship builders anxious for contracts to build new vessels to supplement the American fleet, along comes the Shearer expose. This has created a situation in Congress which means that there is not the slightest probability that any further aid to American merchant shipping is likely for years.

A senator pressing a bill to increase the mail subsidy, for example, would be asked if the ships proposed were built would not the very shipbuilders who employed Shearer to "wreck" the Geneva naval conference make the profits out of building these ships. Moreover the President could be cited, by the opposition to such a measure, as having supported Postmaster General Brown in withholding the mail contracts. There is little doubt in the minds of those on Capitol Hill as to what the popular reaction to such a move would be. Hence no such move is in prospect.

SENATOR JONES points out, in replying to McCarl's accusation that Shipping Board vessels were sold far too cheaply, that the boards have obtained as much as they could. The merits of this controversy are to be thrashed out by an investigation to be directed by the Attorney General, at the direction of the President.

One is reminded, however, of a remark by A. B. Lasker, when he was chairman of the board. A pirate marauding in the West Indies had captured several small merchantmen, and Lasker was asked about it.

"Were they Shipping Board vessels?" inquired Mr. Lasker, his face beaming.

"No," he was told.

His face fell, then brightened.

"Why not hire a pirate? It's a good idea," he said.

Reluctance to scuttle ships that could not be utilized, that no one seemed willing to buy, has been the problem of the board ever since the war. Now it is found purchasers willing to operate the better ships, and it runs into blue sky reservations on the part of the Postoffice Department.

So Britannia will probably continue without much menace from a government-encouraged American merchant marine.

PROBATION ASKED BY MRS. PANTAGES

Husband Prepares Himself for Renewal of Trial on Girl's Charge.

PASTORS AWAIT RULING

Los Angeles, Oct. 6 (A.P.).—While Alexander Pantages' wife awaited hearing October 25 on a plea for probation from a possible one to ten year sentence on conviction of manslaughter, the multimillionaire theater operator prepared himself to appear in court again tomorrow when his trial on statutory charges will be resumed.

Mrs. Pantages was found guilty of manslaughter in the death of Juro Rokumoto, following an automobile accident. Her husband faces charges preferred by Eunice Pringle, 17-yeaer-old dancer.

Request for a new trial was denied the theater magnate's wife Saturday by Judge Carlos Hardy when she appeared in court in a wheel chair, still ill from her apparent collapse which followed conviction. Her application for probation was accepted, however, and she again was released on $50,000 bond after physicians testified that her condition was "dangerous." Sentence was deferred pending the hearing.

Pantages' Trouble Grows.

A secret indictment returned by the county grand jury marked the activities Saturday in the trial of Pantages, after the State made allegations that attempts had been made to tamper with witnesses scheduled to testify on Miss Pringle's charges. The investigation followed a statement by Ivan R. T. Samsonoff, a witness for the prosecution, that a private detective had approached him with assurances that he "would be taken care of" if he would "give Pantages a break."

Miss Pringle will take the stand again tomorrow when defense attorneys plan to cross-examine her regarding her story of the alleged attack by Pantages in his office. It is anticipated that she will be on the stand the greater part of the day District Attorney Buron Fitts, has announced that she will be followed by W. L. Gordon, proprietor of a shop in the Pantages Building, where the attack was said to have taken place.

Pastors Await Decision.

In the preliminary hearing, Gordon's testimony corroborated much of the story told by the girl. The other outstanding feature of the Pantages cases was expected to develop Monday, when the Rev. Robert P. Shuler, pastor of Trinity Methodist Church South, and the Rev. Gustave Briegle, pastor of St. Paul's Presbyterian Church, will hear the findings of three judges sitting en banc at hearings on charges of contempt of court. The two pastors are asserted to have broadcast remarks by radio about the trial of Mrs. Pantages.

Greenville, Ill., Oct. 6 (A.P.). — A fast eastbound Pennsylvania freight train was wrecked last night at Sugar Loaf curve, 5 miles west of Greenville, causing damage estimated today at more than $200,000. COURT BLEACHERS SEAT 87 ON TRIAL

Chart to Identify Poultry Men Accused of Trade-Restraint Plot.

NUMBER SETS RECORD

New York, Oct. 6 (A.P.).—Bleachers like those in a baseball park have been erected in the Federal Building to seat 87 men who go on trial tomorrow on charges of conspiracy to violate the antitrust laws by dominating the $50,000,000 live poultry market of the metropolitan area. In addition to the 87 men, three organizations also will go on trial. The number of defendants is the largest ever tried in a single case in Federal court.

The semicircular wooden stand provided for the defendants has numbered seats along its six tiers so that Judge John C. Knox, the jury and counsel will be able to identify individual defendants with the aid of a seating chart. The defendants, comprising poultry dealers, slaughterers, labor union officials, market men, truck drivers and alleged "strong arm" men, were indicted by a Federal grand jury last January.

The indictment charged members of the New York Live Poultry Chamber of Commerce with restraining persons and firms engaged in the trade from carrying on their business except under conditions imposed by the chamber. One of these conditions, according to the indictment, was that all butchers purchasing live and freshly slaughtered poultry deal only with market men designated by the alleged conspirators and pay prices fixed by them.

Failure to comply with rules of the chamber was followed by threats of violence and boycott, the indictment charged. The indictment listed, among other specific acts, destruction of vehicles and poultry, placing of explosive and incendiary bombs in the places of business of independent dealers and forcible prevention of delivery of poultry.

The area said to be affected by the conspiracy comprises New York and neighboring cities in New Jersey.

Shipments of live poultry are received in this area from 25 States, as far west as Texas, by the dealers, whose annual sales aggregate about $50,000,000.

M'PHERSON MURDER PICTURE CONSTRUCTED BY DETECTIVES

There is a possibility that before the Federal agents conclude their investigation facts may be brought out which will alter this scene entirely, and the Department of Justice is not prepared to accept this or any other solution as definite until its inquiry is completed beyond the possibility that any evidence may have been missed. But it is certainly a picture which can not be turned to the wall in the light of evidence at hand.

Corroborated by Evidence.

It is not a picture drawn entirely from imagination, but one reconstructed from definite information. What that information is can not be told here, for the reason that it reveals not only the tragedy as it occurs, but also the identities of the characters, and it is not in the interest of justice to try a case of such serious importance in the newspapers until the facts have been given the acid test of veracity before a judge and jury, with all of the gaps filled in with other facts which might either strengthen or transform the present outline.

While the Bureau of Investigation is busy deciphering the story of the crime itself, the inquiry being conducted by District Commissioners to determine the justice of charges that police officials were guilty of negligence and misconduct in their handling of the early stages of the McPherson mystery has apparently evaporated in a farce.

Two new bits of information which may or may not have an important bearing on solution of the McPherson mystery were uncovered by The Post yesterday.

Asked Police for Protection.

Two weeks before her death, Virginia McPherson appealed to police of the Third Precinct for protection against a man who had "beaten her up." She appeared at the desk in the station house and made the appeal in person, being promised the protection she sought. Thereupon, greatly relieved, she left the station house and returned to her apartment in the Park Lane.

It was also learned by The Post that a certain Washington physician of some prominence had been in the habit of writing morphine prescriptions for Mrs. McPherson.

Unless the six witnesses called to testify before Corporation Counsel William W. Bride and Maj. Donald A. Davison make their appearance, it is expected that the Commissioners will terminate the investigation and await the senatorial inquiry which is pending, sponsored by Senator Cole Blease (Democrat), of South Carolina. None of the six witnesses is expected to appear or testify.

Senate Inquiry May Be Delayed.

In order not to jeopardize solution of the McPherson murder mystery and the apprehension and punishment of the slayer, it is believed that the senatorial investigation, which would deal with police methods in the McPherson case only as one phase or detail, may be delayed until after the McPherson case is ended. In addition to the present instance, which is serving as the actuating motive in starting the senatorial inquiry into affairs in the Metropolitan Police Department, many other points of police activity have been raised for clarification by such investigation, but it is felt that the entire inquiries will not suffer by being delayed at a time when its institution might endanger justice in the specific action now under way.

From its start the Commissioners' investigation has been a comedy and obviously doomed to failure. On the first day only two witnesses appeared of seven "invited."

On Saturday, the second day, four were called but none appeared. Today, six are scheduled to testify in Bride's office on the fourth floor of the District Building. Of these, one has definitely declined, while none of the other five have acknowledged receipt of the request to appear.

The main difficulty appears to be that Bride and Davison have no authority to compel any witness to appear or testify. The two were appointed as an investigating board by the District Commissioners in response to a demand by the grand jury. But the very members of the grand jury which, as a body functioning in secret session, demanded the investigation, now as individuals are denying the authority of the investigators to investigate, and refusing to lend their support.

City Quiz Likely to End.

Under such circumstances, there is practically nothing else for the investigators to do but "fold up their wings and go home." That is what they intend to do, although last night they were still trying to find a way to make their investigation effective. A definite statement has been promised by the board today.

Demand for the investigation was made by the grand jury in a report accompanying indictment of Robert A. McPherson, jr., for the murder of Virginia McPherson, his wife.

This indictment followed a vociferous criticism of the Police Department by Robert J. Allen, a policeman, who was suspended from duty without pay after he had insisted that the police and the coroner's jury had been deliberately remiss in adopting the theory that Virginia McPherson's death had been due to suicide. The grand jury upheld Allen's insistence that murder had been committed and demanded an investigation of the police officials involved.

These officials are Inspector William S. Shelby, former chief of the Detective Bureau, and Lieut. Edward Kelly, former head of the homicide squad. Both were removed from the Detective Bureau and assigned, at equal rank, to desk duty by the District Commissioners. Both Shelby and Kelly insist they will not be satisfied with exoneration by Bride and Davison, and insist upon specific charges being made against them and trial being brought by the Police Trial Board immediately. This demand by the accused officials is seen as one reason for dropping the investigation when its ineffectiveness became apparent.

Allen Restored to Duty.

Allen was ordered back to duty by the Commissioners on Saturday, as forecast exclusively in The Post that morning. His reinstatement was made upon motion by Proctor L. Dougherty, president of the Board of Commissioners, after both the district attorney and the Department of Justice had declined to avail themselves of the services of Allen, proffered by the Commissioners. The policeman was returned to active duty against the strong protest of Maj. Henry G. Pratt, superintendent of police.

Ordered to report for duty at the Eighth Precinct at 4 o'clock Saturday afternoon, Allen asked and received an extra day off in order to straighten out his affairs and prepare to resume active work without the interference of extraneous details. He started his duties at the Eighth Precinct at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon.

Although he was promised a detective sergeantcy by Shelby if he could prove his murder theory, Allen went back to work yesterday as a private, "pounding the pavements."

He has not forgotten the promise, however, and insists that when the auspicious time arrives he will hold Shelby and Maj. Pratt to the former's promise. In the meantime, he intends to perform his duties as a private efficiently under Capt. Robert E. Doyle and Lieut. Raedy, his new commanding officers.

performed over Miss Rhoads when she fell ill of diphtheria, included a "baking" process in an oven.

The girl, Dabney was quoted as saying, was taken to the Santa Susane Hills and placed in an oven. Each member of the organization placed a hot brick against her body. She was left there until morning, the informant said, when they were told the girl was healed and had gone away.

Police said that after lengthy questioning Mrs. Rhoads tearfully told them that her foster daughter had died January 1, 1925, of diphtheria. Believing she would be resurrected, the body was packed in ice and transported from house to house among select members of the group, she said, for a period of more than a year.

The seven puppies, found in a casket beside that containing Miss Rhoads, were transported along with the body until they, too, had died. Mrs. Rhoads told officers the burial took place February 10, 1926. Her confession led to the discovery of the grave.

Because of the airtight lining of the caskets, the body of the girl and the dogs were well preserved. Mrs. Rhoads named her husband, who is a carpenter, and another man, as the persons who placed the caskets in the grave.

The body was removed to the county coroner's morgue, where a post mortem examination followed to determine the actual cause of the girl's death. Police said one of the theories was poisoning.

Mr. and Mrs. Rhoads were held as material witnesses.

Locate Missing Woman.

No evidence other than that of a natural death was found in an autopsy performed upon the body of the girl.

County Surgeon H. F. Wagner submitted the body to the county chemist for tests. These will be made to determine the suspected presence of poison.

The police, who located Mrs. Blackburn's daughter late today, said she admitted marrying Sam Rizzio in 1924. The young woman, police said, was using the name of Ruth Wieland. She declared Rizzio left her in 1925.

"Rizzio's real name was Scarletta," she said. "He did not wish to be known by that name because of trouble members of his family had in Chicago." She said his father had been sought there on a charge of triple murder.

Rizzio was declared by the woman to have beaten her, with the result that her mother, Mrs. Blackburn, reprimanded him, and he left.

ericksburg road and to investigate a weak trap door over a sidewalk cellar.

Although his beat is a large one, Officer Allen said he was pleased with it.

"I am glad to be back on a beat," he said, "and I expect to stay with the police force for some time. It would take a mighty flattering offer to get me to leave it."

Concerning his investigation which resulted in the grand jury indictment of Robert S. McPherson, jr., husband of the young nurse, who was found strangled to death with a belt to her pajamas in her Park Lane apartment September 14, Allen declared he did the right thing and was sure his solution of the mysterious case as murder would prove correct.

SIMMONS ISSUES UKASE ON TARIFF

Democratic-insurgent coalition to choose between acquiescence or no tariff bill. The administration has been counting on the theory htat inclusion of agricultural rate increases in the bill, as it will come from conference, might break the ranks of the opposition and overcome the five-vote margin by which the President's powers were eliminated.

Coalition's Plan of Action.

Presumably, the coalition has decided that the Republicans will have just as much at stake in the revised rate schedules as the opposition, and that if the administration insists upon retaining the presidential system of tariff making it must take the responsibility for defeat of the bill.

By inference, the statement also means that if President Hoover should decide to veto the bill because of curtailment of his tariff powers he must tak that rsponsibility.

"We are not going to abandon the principle that actuated us in opposing the flexible provision policy as advanced by the President, nor see its overthrow by any subsequent proceedings in the consideration of the pending tariff bill," Senator Simmons said.

"The Simmons-Norris flexible provision amendment is based upon sound principle—a principle that has its roots in the Constitution, and the right of the people along through their representatives in Congress to impose taxes.

Addition or Norris Proposal.

"The Norris proposal added to the original Simmons amendment admittedly meets the chief objection urged by Republican senators on the floor against repealing the flexible provision. This objection was that to make the correction of a specific inequality in the tariff a matter for the Congress along to consider and determine would mean to lay every schedule in the act open to revision with its consequent delay and disturbing uncertainties.

"The proposal of Senator Norris, which was accepted, stated in simple terms, means that when the United States Tariff Commission reports upon any specific item in the tariff, either increasing or decreasing it, no amendment to a bill offered with respect to it shall be considered unless the amendment is germane to that particular item. Obviously, the purpose of the amendment is to remove any delay in action by the Congress with reference to a specific item."

assistance given them, would soon catch up.

The appointment of additional district judges at Los Angeles, New York City and Minnesota was recommended. It pointed out that Congress should authorize the appointment of a judge to take the place of Judge Winslow, who recently resigned, and that Minnesota should have another district judge at once.

The conference urged Congress to expedite action to provide another judge for the middle district of Pennsylvania. The Senate now has before it the name of Albert L. Watson, of Scranton, selected by the President for the judgeship.

Changes in the rules in padlock cases, asked by the district judges of New York City, were referred to the Supreme Court for its consideration in view of constitutional questions involved.

VIRGINIA W. C. T. U. SHIES AT POLITICS

Leaders Deny Inviting Cannon to State Rally at Charlottesville.

WILL "TEACH" RUM EVIL

Special to The Washington Post.

Charlottesville, Vt., Oct. 6.—Local officials said today the forty-seventh annual meeting of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Virginia, which convenes here tomorrow night with Mrs. Howard M. Hoge, State president, presiding, will have no political aspect. One director said the meeting will take no part in the turmoil of State campaign issues, but restrict itself to purely educational instruction in "the evils of drinking."

The director's statement quashes a rumor that Bishop James Cannon, jr., had been invited to speak. She said that if Cannon, Heflin or Hepburn has been invited it was not within her knowledge.

"The convention will not be political," she said. "Of course, when politics is in the air, as it is now, you can't tell what may happen. Some one may get up and make a political speech, but I think not. We will attempt to keep out of the program any reference to the present State campaign. We will try to keep to the policy of the W. C. T. U., which has not been political, but educational."

Monday night will be "Welcome Night." Following an organ recital by E. M. Botts, a devotional service will be conducted by Dr. J. W. Moore, pastor of the First Methodist Church. The delegates will be welcomed by Verban E. Kemp, on behalf of the city; by the Rev. Robert F. Gibson, rector of Christ Episcopal Church, speaking for the churches; Dr. Edwin A. Alderman, on behalf of the University of Virginia, and by Mrs. Emma Owen, for the W. C. T. U.

An offering will be taken by Mrs. Estes Myers, president of the Alleghany County union, and response to the welcome addresses will be made by Mrs. J. D. Crenshaw, of Cambria; Mrs. E. P. White, of Poquoson; Mrs. Amy C. Weech, of Washington, D. C., and Miss Mamie Lewis.

COUNTY OBSERVES FIRE PREVENTION

Week Launched by Special Meeting Sponsored by Potomac Firemen.

SPEAKERS ARE HEARD

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 800. Clarendon, Va.

With the Palm Theater at Potomac filled to its capacity with representatives from the City of Alexandria, Arlington County and the Town of Potomac, the Potomac Volunteer Fire Department launched the observance of Fire Prevention Week yesterday afternoon.

The meeting opened with an invocation by the Rev. George Vest, followed by brief remarks from Richard Roseberry, president of the department and presiding officer.

Fred Birrell, former member of the General Assembly, addressing the firemen, declared no more laudable service can be rendered by man than that service given by the volunteer firemen.

"Little do many think of the dangers facing the man who gets from his warm bed in the early hours of the morning and goes to answer the alarm regardless of the weather," he said.

Walter U. Varney, president of the Arlington-Fairfax Volunteer Firemen's Association and former president of the local department, called upon the citizens to use care in starting fires in their homes for the winter and see that all flues are clean.

Other speakers were Wallace Lawrence, city manager of Alexandria; William Kleysteuber, former mayor of Potomac; James L. Gordon, chief of the department, and T. W. McHugh.

With work on the new Clarendon firemen's hall rapidly nearing completion it is expected that the equipment will be moved in within ten days.

According to A. C. Putnam, president of the department, the present equipment will go into the new building as soon as it is completed.

"As far as what the county board of supervisors will do, regarding the placing of the new equipment, which some months ago was ordered for the Clarendon Department, in the new firehouse, in face of the statements claimed to have been made that it could not go into the building being erected by the department, is a question I do not care to have anything more to say about," stated Mr. Putnam.

"While we met with considerable opposition at the time the building was started, after every effort was made to find a more suitable location most of the opposition has cleared away. The securing of the new equipment I leave to the taxpayers of the territory which is covered by the department and I feel confident that Clarendon will still have a modern fire department," Mr. Putnam said.

The Jefferson District Fire Department will hold its monthly meeting tomorrow night in the Firemen's Hall, on Frazier avenue, Virginia Highlands.

The following committee chairmen have been appointed: Finance E. J. Gilsmore; legal, John C. Gall; membership, Oscar Reynolds; hall, S. L. Beales; entertainment, C. Frank Allwine; grievance, C. Bixler; house, W. L. Allwine; building, J. W. Welch, and band, B. S. Kidwell.

The October meeting of the Virginia Highlands Citizens Association will be held tonight in the Jefferson District Firemen's Hall at 8 o'clock.

A full attendance is requested, as plans for much special work to be carried on by the association will be considered.

The first-aid class of the ladies' auxiliary of the Arlington First Department, which is being sponsored by the Arlington County Chapter, American Red Cross, will hold its second meeting tomorrow night in the auditorium of the Patrick Henry School. The class is in charge of Benjamin H. Gammage, of the local Red Cross chapter.

The Clarendon Citizens' Association will hold its semimonthly meeting tomorrow night in the Citizens Hall at 8 o'clock.

There being many matters of county-wide and local interest to be considered, all members and others interested in the welfare of the county and local community are asked to attend the meeting.

The Holy Name Society of St. James Catholic Church, at West Falls Church, will meet tomorrow night at the home of Thomas Ballard. J. O. Martin will preside.

The executive committee of the newly organized Citizens' Association at Lyon Park will hold its first meeting tomorrow night in the community house at 8 o'clock.

All members are requested to attend as the question of a constitution for the new organization will be the principal subject of discussion.

J. B. S. Norton, of the University of Maryland, will be the principal speaker at the meeting of the Lyon Park Garden Club to be held Wednesday night at the community house. Norton will deliver a special lecture on Dahlias.

C. F. Oliver, superintendent of the Sunday School of St. George's Episcopal Church, announces that there will be a meeting of the teachers tomorrow night in the Parish Hall.

Plans are rapidly nearing completion for the joint celebration of the Ballston Citizens Association and the Ballston Volunteer Fire Department of their twenty-fifth anniversary which will be held Thursday night, October 24.

Among the speakers will be Representative R. Walton Moore and State Senator Frank L. Ball.

The committee in charge of the arrangements is composed of: Grover E. Payne, chairman; Mrs. Cathrine M. Rogers, vice chairman; Mrs. Rachel V. White, secretary-treasurer; Mrs. Thomas J. Crack, Mrs. Alice Thomas, Mrs. Ruth McC. Payne, Howard A. Smoot, J. P. Divine, Eugene Payne, Thomas J. Crack and J. R. Malloch.

Woman Is Suicide Over Cook Stove

West Virginia Wife Takes Own Life in Second Effort in Week.

Special to The Washington Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Oct. 6.—Mrs. Pearl Virginia Alderton, 33, wife of Leo Alderton, committed suicide in the kitchen at the home of her grandparents some time between midnight yesterday and 6 a. m. today by asphyxiation. Her body was found by her grandfather when he arose Sunday morning. The face was buried in a towel which lay on a wide open gas jet on a cookstove.

Physicians thought she had been dead several hours. Coroner H. G. Tonkin held the death a suicide.

Mrs. Alderton was prevented from self-destruction last Tuesday by means of a stomach pump at a local hospital after it was found she had swallowed a number of poison tablets. That she prepared deliberately for the act last night was believed by her grandparents, who said she had been reading her Bible. She gave no hint of her intention, however, going upstairs as though to retire. When her grandmother retired she apparently returned to the kitchen within a short time. Her bed had not been disturbed.

Mrs. Alderton is survived by her husband, her father and a brother. She was a native of this city.

Luray, Va., Oct. 6.—Extensive operations, sponsored by the United States Geological Survey are in progress here in charge of L. M. Prindle, of Washington, who is making a study of rock formations in the bed of the Shenandoah River of this county to ascertain if the strata are such as to be stable for hydroelectric pore and dam sites.

Engineers of the War Department are also working along the Shenandoah River in this county for the same purpose. The War Department engineers are working under the direction of Maj. Brehon Somervell, of Washington.

The surveys are being conducted under the authority of Congress and are making investigation of navigation, hydroelectric development and flood control of the Shenandoah River. According to Maj. Broken Arm Results Fatally for Victim

Special to The Washington Post.

Luray, Va., Oct. 6.—A broken arm, suffered by Clarence Cubbage, of this county, a month ago, resulted in death yesterday at his home, 13 miles south of Luray. Hospital treatment at that time removed half a dozen pieces of the arm bone that within a short time had grown into the flesh in all directions. In the short time the growth of the broken bones had so twisted the arm that it could not be moved in any direction. Physicians declare that the strange directions taken by the broken bones had never before been known in the annals of modern surgical practice.

Mr. Cubbage had been thrown from a fractious horse. He was a son of Peter Cubbage, of Markesville District. The burial will take place in the Stanley Seventh Day Adventist Cemetery in this county tomorrow.

WIFE 15, TRUANT; OFFICIALS PUZZLED

Albemarle Chief Wonders Who Is Responsible, Father or Husband.

SPOUSE 56 YEARS OLD

Special to The Washington Post.

Charlottesville, Va., Oct. 6.—The new compulsory educational law, instituted this year by county school officials as part of a program "to stamp out illiteracy in Albemarle County," and which the officers have stated would be "strictly enforced," has raised a problem which is perplexing Superintendent A. L. Bennett. The law states that no child under 16 shall remain out of school, and further declares that any person employing or harboring a delinquent, or otherwise being instrumental in keeping such a child out of school, is equally guilty and subject to penalty under the law. The case in point is as follows:

School records show that Mary M. Jones, who gave her age as 14, was in the Alberene School last year. She did not return this session. Investigation disclosed that last June 4 she married Nathaniel P. Harlow, an Alberene marchant, who gave his age as 56. At the time of the ceremony the girl's age was stated as being 16. This was Harlow's fourth matrimonial venture. He has six children, three of whom are now in school.

Superintendent Bennett admits the law is obviously being violated, but is harassed as to who is the culpable person. He is debating whether Mr. Jones is the offender, since he is the father of the delinquent; or if Harlow must be the one to answer the charge, as he is now responsible for his young wife; or whether, since the girl is now married, she is the one who should be brought to the bar of justice for her own offense.

PLAYING WITH DYNAMITE.

If the Democrats of the Senate can accomplish their aims the tariff bill is doomed. They intend to defeat it, with the help of Republican guerrillas who for various reasons wish to discredit President Hoover. The coalition formed by Democrats and Republican irregulars no longer conceals its purpose.

Taking into consideration the constituencies of Democratic senators, their strategy in trying to defeat tariff revision is the most unfortunate for them that they could adopt. Their States and communities are composed of farmers, manufacturers and workers anxious for steady employment. The denial of tariff relief to agriculture and industry would be a blow to the prosperity of those States and communities as well as to that of all other parts of the country.

The extra session was called for the special purpose of bringing relief to agriculture through direct legislation and tariff revision. The Republican House and President managed to push through the farm relief measure in spite of the opposition of the Senate coalition, but they may not be able to push through tariff revision. If the Republican effort should be a failure it will not be the result of neglect or betrayal of the farmers' cause, but will be chargeable chiefly to Democratic obstruction.

How can the Democratic party expect to win popular favor by blocking tariff relief to agriculture? Can any Democratic senator win the votes of farmers by showing that he destroyed all hope of farm relief through the tariff? His boast that he also destroyed the hope of industrial relief will not console his farm constitutents.

Democrats throughout the country are told that Democratic senators are the best friends of the farmer. If this be true, the farmer is to be sacrificed by his best friends if they can accomplish the feat.

President Hoover's popularity is enhanced by the stupidity of the Senate opposition to tariff revision. Assuming that this opposition will defeat the bill, the country will blame the obstructionists if business conditions should be impaired and agriculture disappointed. The voters, without regard to party, will look upon President Hoover as their steadfast friend, who was beaten in his fight for them. For every vote he would lose because of his defeat a thousand would rally to him, including disgusted Democrats bent upon wreaking vengeance upon their senators.

The prosperity of the country and the welfare of millions of individuals are bound up in tariff revision. These individuals are workers first and partisans afterward. No worker carries his partisanship to the extent of willingly going without a livelihood for the sake of beating Mr. Hoover's proposed tariff revision. What the workers want is busy factories, busy railroads, prosperous farmers and plenty of employment, and they are expecting to have this condition brought about by Republicans and Democrats. If the Republicans do the best they can, and the Democrats and recreant Republicans defeat them, with the result that business disturbances and hard times develop, workers will be very quick to place the blame and apply the punishment.

It is well for an opposition party to be on guard, to pick flaws in administration programs if they exist, and to "play politics" in general; but it is a very risky thing for an opposition party or clique to stand in the way of legislation necessary for the maintenance of employment. The farmers, industries and workers believe that the tariff bill is such legislation. If Democratic senators were politically wise they would not run the risk of antagonizing the great majority of their own constituents.

CAMPAIGNING AGAINST NOISE.

For years there has been a lot of talk and little action against unnecessary noise. The wail of sleepless tenants and distracted office workers has naturally been loudest in New York, where every major sound reverberates from one skyscraper to another. It is not surprising that New York should take the lead in a movement to restore quiet. Reports indicate that that city is making an earnest effort to "solve this growing problem of metropolitan life." Health Commissioner Wynne is organizing a committee of eleven engineers, neurologists, otologists, builders and lawyers to consider what is the best method of procedure. Associations representing property interests of more than $7,000,000,000 have pledged themselves to cooperate in combating the noise evil.

Annoyance from noise is by no means a modern affliction. Years ago city dwellers were disturbed by horse cars, peanut stand whistles, hucksters' cries and evening practice on the piano. It is only since the screech of automobile brakes and horns, the rat-tat-tat of riveting machines and electric drills, the hum of the airplane, the roar of buses and the ceaseless brawl of the radio have been added to the daily experience of city residents that the problem has become acute. Noises are also more distressing nowadays because of the tendency to huddle in apartments.

Neurologists are calling attention to the seriousness of constant noise. A furious din striking on a person's ear drums all day long is fatiguing and damaging to health. Dr. Paul V. Winslow, ear and nerve specialist of New York, is bolstering up the antinoise campaign with a claim that a large portion of that city's divorces are caused by excessive noise. Throughout the day husbands and wives are subjected to distracting and maddening noise. They go home at night in a nervous condition, and engage in irritable disputes over nothing, which lead to the divorce court. "Noise," he concludes, "is like an electric chair. It doesn't hurt. It just ruins you for life."

The most encouraging fact is that much of the racket heard daily in the large cities is avoidable. Noise from construction work can be largely eliminated with the use of molten rivets. Automobiles make much more noise than is necessary. Airplanes could be required to fly high enough to avoid disturbance. Experts are working on schemes to make street cars less noisy, and alarm clocks are being properly condemned. Much might be accomplished by inducing the owners of radios and blatant musical instruments to have a heart.

While Washington is more favored than many cities, it is becoming intolerably noisy. Why are the many racket-making nuisances ignored here? Washington has an excellent opportunity of leading the way toward abatement of all unnecessary clamor. Here is good work for the Bureau of Standards, the Cosmos Club, the National Research Council, the American Engineering Council and the American Civic Association.

FIRE PREVENTION.

By presidential proclamation this week is set aside as fire prevention week. On October 9, 1899, the anniversary of the great fire of 1871, President McKinley laid the corner stone of the present Federal building in Chicago. In the following years the States, one by one, set aside that day as fire prevention day, and in 1921 the first presidential proclamation extending the observance to a fire prevention week, was issued. This year President Hoover calls attention to the fact that for two consecutive years fire losses in the United States have been decreased and that there are indications of a further reduction during the present year. "A further great reduction of this tremendous waste," he says, "could be effected through the exercise of ordinary care on the part of our citizens."

The United States Chamber of Commerce reports that total fire losses in the United States last year came to about $475,000,000, an appreciable decrease from the record-breaking total of $560,000,000 in 1926. But fire's annual cost is far larger than the immediate loss. If to the actual fire loss is added the cost of maintaining fire departments, together with the value of the necessary extra water equipment and fire alarm service, a figure exceeding $1,100,000,000 is obtained. Last year property owners paid fire insurance premiums totaling almost $640,000,000. Insurance rates have been increasing steadily in recent years.

Apparently the fire prevention movement has borne some fruit. It has manifested itself in the increased efficiency of fire departments, in the elimination of firetraps and hazards, and in the added emphasis that is laid upon fireproof and fire resisting construction. But the fundamentally important factor in fire prevention is brought out in a paragraph in President Hoover's proclamation of fire prevention week. "To each citizen I recommend," said the President, "full cooperation in securing wider understanding of individual responsibility, for it is only through further elimination of human negligence that lasting progress can be attained."

COURTESY OF THE PORT.

A controversy over extending the courtesy of United States ports to members of Congress and other officials of the Government arose last spring when several persons were alleged to have abused the privilege. The Treasury Department announced that all privileges of this kind would be abolished. That action was designed to stop abuses, but it worked many hardships on passengers entering this country. Not only were distinguished officials and guests forced to go through the routine of waiting for inspection, but passengers who were called home because of illness, death or other disaster found it impossible to get special attention. Even passengers who were themselves sick or infirm had to wait their turn or leave their baggage.

The new order issued by the Treasury will cofrect these obvious defects in the previous ruling and allow members of Congress courtesy of the port when they are entitled to it. Government officials will be granted free entry, or exemption from payment of duties, when they return from a trip abroad on official business. Officials of this class will be entitled to orders expediting their baggage, not including free entry, when they return from a trip for private business or pleasure. The same courtesy will be extended to distinguished foreign visitors.

The new ruling is a distinct improvement over the previous one. Government officials and others to whom the Nation wishes to show courtesy are entitled to special attention at ports of entry. It is a sorry state of affairs when a government is so suspicious of its own officials that their baggage must go through a routine inspection.

It will be remembered, however, that the rigid regulation was adopted only after it became obvious that the privileges extended by the Treasury were being abused. If the temporary withdrawal of courtesy of the port has impressed those few with the fact that they were violating a trust, it has served its purpose.

GEN. BUTLER'S ADVICE.

In seeking to ferret out the weak points in Federal prohibition, Chairman Wickersham, of the National Law Enforcement Commission, did well to call upon Gen. Smedley Butler. Three years' experience in trying to stamp out saloons and speak-easies in Philadelphia gave Gen. Butler a personal knowledge of prohibition problems, and he has some very pronounced views on the subject. Few persons are in a better position to know the deficiencies in the present methods of enforcement.

Briefly, the Philadelphia general's advice was to go out for big game and let the little fry go. He told the committee that so long as enforcement agents snoop around after half-pints on the hip and let the racketeers and king bootleggers do business unmolested, enforcement will be a failure. "Using 16-inch guns to kill sparrows" is the way in which he referred to this method of penalizing the consumer and small dealer. He might have completed the analogy by comparing the methods used against the "higher-ups" to attacking an elephant with a popgun.

If enforcement were aimed at the source of supply instead of at the individual who takes a nip, Gen. Butler believes that prohibition could be made 80 per cent effective. That sounds a little optimistic for one who has had such close contact with the speak-easy nuisance, but there is little doubt that substantial progress could be made. His advice dovetails with the suggestion of Chairman Wickersham that the Government direct its energies against smuggling, interstate traffic and the larger sources of supply. No doubt the commission found it good counsel.

Election of the head of the Coca Cola Co. to the presidency of a motor car company may be a shrewd propaganda move on the part of prohibition or police authorities.

Baseball mogul foresees the day when teams will be transported in airplanes. This would be highly appropriate, inasmuch as many of them are up in the air most of the time anyway.

THE BEST EXCUSE

From the London Times.

The anger of Gen. Zivkovitch, representing the government of Yugoslavia, has fallen heavily upon the village of Krantz, which he visited unexpectedly the other day. He went to the courthouse hoping to find a busy hum of sentencing and acquitting going on, and found instead a deserted room, and a single lonely prisoner in an unguarded gaol. The judge and court, ushers and warders, and in short, all those whom Krantz can show in the way of legal authority, were away fishing, and fishing is now to be their livelihood as well as their hobby so far as Gen. Zivkovitch can make it, for he has sacked the lot. It is not only that they were playing truant, but they were amusing themselves in a pursuit which, more than any other, destroys the sense of evidence and the love of truth. When they might have been engaged in contemplating and punishing crime, activities which, if the voracious appetite of the world for detective stories is any guide, are widely envied, they preferred to fish, taking less interest in their fellow men than in creatures of low development and alien environment.

Fishing, whatever its failings as a moral teacher, teaches men to cling to hope, and there is a ray of hope for these men of Kranz. If anything can help to restore them to civic life, it should be the recent and apparently very timely remarks about fishing made by another official in another continent.

President Hoover has brought forward arguments for fishing which may well move Gen. Zivkovitch. Fishing, he says, is a good and humbling discipline for men in high places. It teaches the essential equality of all men in the large and melancholy eyes of fish, and the bench of Kranz may plausibly urge that he, like President Hoover, judged it wise to remind himself from time to time that he was made of the same stuff as the men who appeared before him in the dock. Fishing is next to prayer, says President Hoover, in detaching men from the mundane circumstance that enmeshes them, and if Gen. Zivkovitch had found the court and prison authorities at prayer he could but have passed on, edified.

Fishing, after all, is contemplation, very often of the most prolonged and undistracted kind. Aristotle as a Greek may not count for much with the government of Yugoslavia, and ingeniously applied quotations from his works on the superiority of the contemplative order the active life may not carry all the weight they should. But anglers have little need to quote Aristotle, for few bodies of men are more serenely conscious of the irreproachable and elevated character of their pastime. Of all the activities for which men may absent themselves from their duties, fishing makes the most widely felt appeal. Sleeping is a more universal pastime, but the sleeper forfeits sympathy by voyaging into an unknown world where he may be up to anything for all other folk can tell. Other pastimes involve activity and make changes in the world and arouse suspicion. Only the fisherman leaves the world pretty well as he finds it, and this, in Eastern Europe, which has been seen so much change, is no small point in mitigation of the misdeeds of the panjandrums of Kranz.

COUNSELING THE BOY.

I shall not care what blunders you may make,
What petty losses you may bid me share;
I shall not fret about each small mistake.
Stay clean and manly and I shall not care.

Shun all that's shameful. That is all I ask,
When you depart let men be glad you came.
Give all you can of courage to your task,
Then if you fail, have failure free from shame.

I would not bind you with parental chains.
Nor have you think to please me you must win.
Fail if you must, and still my love remains.
I only ask you not to stoop to sin.

Use what you have of judgment and of tact,
With all men living keep your dealings true.
Beware not blundering, but the shameful act.
Further than this I would not counsel you.

They Must Make Whoopee Until Freedom Becomes an Old Story

By ROBERT QUILLEN

Forty years ago an itinerant preacher held "revival services" in a patch of woods near a small town of the Middle West. Each night he invited the members of his congregation to stand and testify concerning their needs and sorrows.

A frail, bent woman, prematurely aged by hard and thankless work on a farm, stood up one night and voiced a protest for her class. "My husband beats me too hard," she quavered. "I know a woman needs some beatin', but he's too rough."

No one was very indignant, for the woman was not a rare exception in that community.

As late as 25 years ago, middle-class fathers who were urged to surrender their girls first took the precaution of asking: "Will you be good to her?"

There was need of that question. A youth whose ardent professions of love were insufficient to overcome the reluctance of his sweetheart confessed the shame of his sex and his times when he added: "I'll be good to you, dear."

And girls, no matter how much they loved, still felt some uneasiness because of the tales they had heard and the things they had seen, and asked wistfully and timidly: "Will you be good to me?"

What brutes men were, to inspire fear in those they adored!

There were exceptions, of course. There were tender and gentle husbands who treasured and cherished their wives. And there were hard-faced, sharp-tongued women who ruled their craven husbands.

But husbands, as a class, were domineering, inconsiderate and neglectful; wife-beating, though condemned by the community, still was a common thing; women were resigned to a position of inferiority, and the ordinary wife felt that she had no rightful share in her husband's earnings except as his generosity gave her alms.

Men were lords; women were chattels. And this despite the fact that girls in school commonly outranked boys of their own age and the superiority of women in culture and native wit was apparent to everybody.

Now the mare has kicked off the harness and is free. Her head is high and her eyes are bright. She rejoices as a strong man to run a race. And if she cavorts and prances and kicks too high in the joy of new-found liberty, who shall blame her? It is a natural reaction. The suppressed always run amuck when first they are drunk with liberty.

Let them do what they will. Praise whatever gods there be that "dutiful wives" no longer have stooped shoulders and eyes empty of hope.

The slave is free. And if she lifts a hand against some dullard who still thinks himself the master, more power to her elbow!

THE ONCE OVER

By H. I. PHILLIPS

THESE LATE SEASON WORLD SERIES.

If the world's series comes can winter be far behind? Every season it seems that the so-called diamond classic is held later. Whether the magnates are working in cooperation with the overcoat and mitten interests is not definitely known, but from baseball fans all over the country there comes a cry for a world's series under conditions that make attendance safe without flannel underwear, earlaps and a liberal supply of cough medicine.

• • • •

"Out of the series by Christmas!" is the slogan of the fans.

• • • •

The race in both leagues was decided nearly a month ago and by this time everybody should be washed up, including the fans. Instead of that the series is just swinging into action at a time of year when anything is possible from chilblains to the biggest blizzard since 1888.

• • • •

If the magnates continue to defer the world's series it may yet be necessary for the players to run the bases on dog sleds and for the fans to carry plenty of pemmican and shoot polar bears for sustenance on the way.

• • • •

Mr. Elmer Twitchell, the old baseball fan, today voiced the sentiments of many baseball bugs when he came out in favor of either holding the series in warm weather or going the limit and playing the opening game the night before Christmas.

• • • •

"The series should be played at a time of year when the fans will have some idea whether to dress for a beach party or a dash for Spitzenberg," said Elmer feelingly.

"When a series is held the second week in October a feller can never tell whether to expect sunstroke or pneumonia. There would be just as much sense to it if the big colleges scheduled their big football contests for the Fourth of July, or if the Yale-Harvard boat race was put down for Thanksgiving afternoon.

• • • •

"There is a place for everything, but mid-October is no place for a world's series," thundered Mr. Twitchell.

• • • •

He then dictated an open letter to the magnates in both leagues suggesting that since they evidently have made a promise never to hold a world's series in hot weather, they go the limit and arrange to hold the series each year in two installments, the first few games during Christmas week and the others during the first big January snowstorm.

• • • •

"I think these dates would be much more satisfactory to the fans, since the magnates won't allow a series to be held in a season of reliable weather," argued Mr. Twitchell. "I would have the first game played Christmas Day. Commander Byrd would throw out the first ball, and I would nominate Capt. Bartlett to do the umpiring. I would get a couple of Eskimos to do the pitching and make ground rules specifying that a ball lost in the snow would be good for only two bases.

• • • •

"I am not joking," concluded Mr Twitchell. "It would give the fans an even break. And I don't think the magnates would object to a mid-winter series. They are headed that way right now."

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

California Observer Demands Disarmament Before America "Goes Broke."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: But a few years ago our national expenditure was well under $1,000,000,000 annually. Now billions are talked of and lightly voted by our representatives at Washington.

Are we getting our money's worth? If so, how? Moreover, who foots the bill? In 1917 we took a very active and costly part in a "war to end war." Today President Hoover tells us we are spending more for warlike purposes than any European country. He adds that, unless disarmament parleys realize their mission, we shall in 1933 be saddled with an outlay of $803,000,000, as against $266,000,000 before fighting that fight to "end war." Moreover, this is in addition to some annual $800,000,000 in caring for war veterans, &c. Such facts become very interesting when we realize that the only source of Government is the citizens' pockets; there is no mysterious, inexhaustible supply elsewhere!

What does the man in the street get for his money? Simply an aggravation of life's two certainties, viz: Speedier death and heavier taxes; also his customers killed off. He is told these $40,000,000 battleships are to "police the seas." Are there any villainous Algerian or Chinese pirates making the seas perilous for passengers? Or is it simply senseless suspicion, engendering fear and hate among nations?

Moreover, can not we realize the utter impotence of these ships confronted by air fleets dropping bombs, with 4,000 pounds of high explosives, from 20,000-foot altitude? Why can not world statesmen accept wisely Gen. Grant's dictum: "There never was a time when, in my opinion, some way could not be found to prevent the drawing of the sword?"

So, hurrah for Hoover and world disarmament!

Distressing Condition of Disabled Veterans—Pitiful Case of a Patient in Kentucky.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am a disabled veteran of the World War and am asking the privilege of stating some facts to the public. More than 65 per cent of the disabled veterans of the World War confined in the Government hospitals are noncompensated or nonpensioned. The great majority of us have been here many months, many as long as two to three years and without immediate hope for recovery. For many of us our very days are numbered, for in this particular hospital, we are T. B. patients.

The Government provides only the bare necessities. Many of us have families that suffer privation. Congress has neglected to provide any constructive legislation since 1924 to take care of this problem. We, the disabled, feel this is an injustice in comparison to the treatment afforded veterans of the Spanish-American War and the Civil War.

I have a wife and six children who are absolutely without means of support. Unless Congress affords some means of relief I shall be forced to leave the hospitals against medical advice, thereby jeopardizing not only my own life, but the lives of others, and attempt to earn a living for my family.

How to Save Time and Expense and Obviate Mystery in Certain Cases.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have a plan whereby repetition of the McPherson case can be avoided. It is simply this:

Whenever any one intends committing suicide let either he or she leave a note saying, "This is suicide," or words to that effect.

If no note is left the authorities will know it is murder.

To make this plan a Nation-wide success it would be necessary to notify the entire populace by means of the press to follow this plan.

It seems to me that any fair-minded person would rather do this than put the police to so much trouble and the taxpayers to added expense.

I am sure that were I going to commit suicide I would much rather do this than to cause so much trouble and expense by leaving the matter in doubt.

Bus Operators Not Ordering Drivers to Smash Through Traffic, Says Mr. Pflug.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Owing to the fact that we are now operating into your beautiful city we are naturally quite interested in all motor bus items. One has been handed me having the heading of "Deadly Bus Driving." In this I note the following: "Are drivers ordered directly or indirectly to smash their way through traffic?" I would say if they are, the owner is as much to blame as the driver, but I am sure that there is no bus operator operating out of your city who is giving any such instructions to his drivers. I have had the pleasure of meeting the majority of the bus operators who operate out of your city, and their aim is to place the motor bus business on the highest level of any transportation.

Inspector Shelby Defended as an Honest and Capable Officer.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: All law-abiding citizens who have ever had the privilege of coming in contact with Inspector Shelby have been impressed with him as a man of the highest personal integrity and a conscientious and able public official.

To make a scapegoat of him now without even waiting for the final facts to be established would seem to be both drastic and uncalled for.

His dollar will be returned and the license will be marked "Void." Pulliam is supposed to have said that Miss Stoval's age was 20 while she is supposed to be 17.

Austrians Will Travel In Artistic Pullman Cars

Vienna, Oct. 6 (A.P.).—Pullman cars that will appeal to esthetic as well as practical tastes soon will carry passengers on the Austrian Federal Railway system. The road has decided to apply the principles of modern art to the new Pullman coaches which will supersede the old-fashioned carriages of the International Express trains.

Architect Josef Hoffmann, professor at the Austrian Academy of Fine Arts, has designed the new model of the Pullman car, which, it is declared, in point of decorative art and comfort, will surpass any car of that description.

Prof. Shuster, who has left the faculty of Columbia University to head the New Jersey Normal College at Trenton, says that many parts of mathematics as formerly taught have been eliminated and a wealth of new material has been introduced. Its practical use is emphasized in teaching.

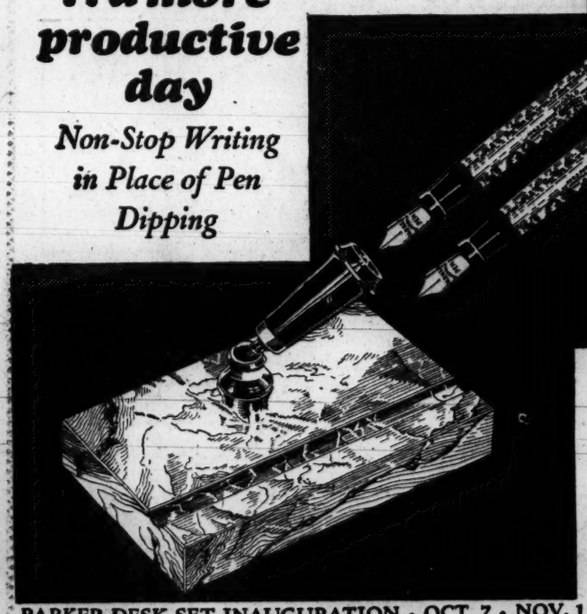
Non-Stop Writing in Place of Pen Dipping



Removable taper changes the Parker from a Desk Pen to a Pocket Pen when you leave the office, or vice versa on arrival. Parker alone includes complete cap and pocket clip with every Desk Pen. Hence a Duofold Pen does for two of other makes.

Now all Parker Desk Pens include Pocket Cap and Clip making 2 Pens of One

People who sit inside offices are rapidly discovering that Parker Desk Sets not only increase their daily output, but give the whole place a valuable air of distinction and alertness. This contrasts strongly with the slow-going aspect of offices that still try to exist on a diet of old-fashioned, ink-spattered ink-wells and corroded steel pens.

If your office or home has that obsolete look, call or phone any Parker dealer to see how little it costs to inaugurate Parker Desk Sets.

Parker Duofold Desk Fountain Pens are convertible for Pocket use, too. They carry their own ink—24% more than average, size for size—and write with Pressureless Touch. They're *guaranteed forever against all defects.

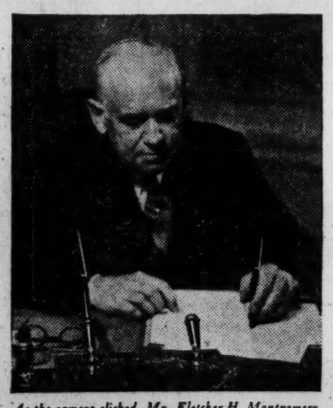
Bases of Onyx, Glass, Marble or Porcelain, with Ball and Socket Sleeve, hold the pen ever ready within sight and reach; and ornament the finest desk.

$6.50 to $100, including convertible Pens.

THE PARKER PEN COMPANY, Janesville, Wisconsin, Sales and Service Station, Singer Building, New York City

*To prove Parker Duofold is a pen of lifelong perfection, we offer to make good any defect, provided complete pen is sent by the owner direct to the factory with 10c for return postage and insurance.

PARKER DESK SET INAUGURATION • OCT. 7 • NOV. 1



As the camera clicked, Mr. Fletcher H. Montgomery, Knox Hat Company President, was signing, via Parker Duofold, the lease of the new Knox Store, to be opened in the St. Francis Hotel, San Francisco.

Fondness for this classic pen is no more than would be expected of one whose task and training is to maintain the unbroken reputation of Knox Hats for style and quality leadership dating from 1838.

'Twas a balmy Sunday evening, and a goodly crowd was there watching the show at Poli's, near the corner of the square. That, with all its crudities, a paraphrase of "The Face On the Bar-room Floor" would be one way of beginning a review of "Hello Yourself," the musical comedy now occupying the stage at Poli's, but——

There are other ways, too, in which it might be reviewed; in fact, a score of ways. In the original edition, "Hello Yourself," won laurels as an outstanding collegiate comedy — one of those fraternity-sorority affairs, where freshmen and fresh women meet and mingle on the campus; but that was the original edition.

Well, any way, a goodly crowd was at Poli's watching the chorines and the principals — the principals, of course, should come first in any well-ordered review; but, as matters here stand, it makes little difference who comes first, or last. All of which may sound like a grand slam. It isn't exactly that. The boys and girls at Poli's are doing the best they can. It may have been the first night audience, an audience made up of sophisticates and not sophomores—men and women who have seen better plays. At any rate, they just sat back, at ease, in their chairs, and without lifting a hand, let the rah rahs run down.

Maybe there are too many universities and colleges in and near Washington, and that Washingtonians are too loyal to the local collegiates. Whatever the analysis, there was not much enthusiasm at Poli's last night, on the nether or pay-as-you-enter side of the footlights. In justice to the principals—here they come first—and the chorines, of "Hello Yourself," it should be here set down that their enthusiasm never waned. That, then, is a compliment. The troupe has evidently been playing out in the sticks—out where the test begins. Because of this, and being unfamiliar with what must have resembled an embalmed audience, the boys and girls sacrificing themselves for art's sake—if his name is Art—probably wondered how Washingtonians got that way; why they didn't show more life. On this score, the audience is always the judge—and the jury. The verdict seems to have been guilty.

One song inspired its own answer: "You've Got a Way With You." As the little singer repeated the refrain, some wag whispered, "But You Can't Get Away With Me," which probably goes for the whole operetta. There are spots, to be sure; but not enough of them; and comedy, and some good chorus numbers; but not too good—and thus "Hello Yourself" comes off as just another one of those collegiate musical comedies.

GAYETY

Youth and beauty are conspicious in "Ginger Girls," which made its initial appearance at the Gayety Theater yesterday.

Leading this cast was "Verne," dancing and singing soubrette, and Tommy Levine, a Hebrew dialect comedian, assisted by Blanche Burnette, Thelma Gleason, Vic Gasele and Charles Robinson.

"Verne," a pretty girl, won a high place in the hearts of those present, possesses a good voice, some looks and a pair of clever feet. Her every effort was applauded.

Tommy Levine and Charles Robinson, ably aided by Don Trent, classy-clothed straight man, garnered much laughter from the crowd.

Vic Gasele, soubrette, entertained with some clever dancing. Possessing unusual talent, she was forced to take several encores.

Two big scenes, "The Graveyard" and "The Peacock Fashion Shop," afforded ample opportunity for splendid scenic and costume detail.

A group of 16 chorus girls live up to the title of the show for their fast and peppy work, of the best seen here this season.

10,000 to View Artillery Show

Ordnance Department Will Demonstrate Progress at Aberdeen.

An attendance of 10,000, including Cabinet members, senators, generals and admirals, is expected at the huge Army ordnance firing program at Aberdeen Proving Grounds, Md., on Thursday, acording to announcement yesterday by Maj. Philip R. Faymonville, of New York City.

Secretary of War James W. Good, Secretary of the Navy Charles F. Adams, Postmaster General Walter F. Brown and Secretary of Commerce Robert P. Lamont have notified Maj. Gen. Clarence C. Williams, chief of ordnance, U. S. A., that they will attend. Senator Hiram Bingham will head the National Aeronautic Association delegates. Maj. Gen. Wendell C. Neville, commandant, U. S. M. C.; Admiral Charles F. Hughes, chief of naval operations; Maj. Gen. Charles H. Bridges, the adjutant general of the Army, and Maj. Gen. James E. Fechet, chief of the Army Air Corps, will be among the notables to attend.

Held in connection with the eleventh annual meeting of the Army Ordnance Association, the spectacular day-and-night firing program will demonstrate ordnance progress since the World War to technicians and manufacturers. Machine guns, automatic cannon, quick-firing field artillery pieces and heavier guns, including the mighiest gun built in this country, will be fired during the demonstration.

Attendance Doubles At Post's Model Home

Announcement that The Washington Post model furnished home at 1645 Jonquil street at Seventeenth street, will be open for public inspection but two weeks longer, caused attendance at the beautiful house in Rock Creek Hills, the R. E. Latimer development, practically to double yesterday.

The house is completely furnished and decorated by W. & J. Sloane, of New York and Washington. The home will be open daily and Sunday until 9:30 o'clock in the evening. It is reached by driving out Sixteenth street extended to Jonquil street and then turning left.

Every one who views it is pleased with the beautiful home, its ideal location and its more than $17,000 worth of handsome furnishings. Two Packard sedans and a Buick roadster have been added to the furnishings by Washington agencies for these makes.

The Seven Dials Mystery

A Serial Story by AGATHA CHRISTIE

"What I wonder is—will his stomach stand it?" she went on, tearfully. "To have him an invalid—with his ideas—oh, it won't bear thinking of."

"He looks very hearty," said Jimmy, consolingly.

"He's got something on his mind," said Lady Coote. "Worried, that's what he is. I know."

"What's he worried about?"

"I don't know. Perhaps something at the works. It's a great comfort for him having Mr. Bateman. Such an earnest young man—and so conscientious."

"Marvelously conscientious," agreed Jimmy.

"Oswald thinks a lot of Mr. Bateman's judgment. He says that Mr. Bateman is always right."

"That was one of his worst characteristics years ago," said Jimmy, feelingly.

Lady Coote looked slightly puzzled. "That was an awful jolly week-end I had with you at Chimneys," said Jimmy. "I mean it would have been awfully jolly if it hadn't been for poor old Gerry kicking the bucket. Jolly nice girls."

"I find girls very perplexing," said Lady Coote. "Not romantic, you know. Why, I embroidered some handkerchiefs for Sir Oswald with my own hair when we were engaged."

"Did you?" said Jimmy. "How marvelous. But I suppose girls haven't got long enough hair to do that nowadays."

A Pretty Idea.

"That's true," admitted Lady Coote. "But, oh, it shows in lots of other ways. I remember when I was a girl, one of my—well, my young men—picked up a handful of gravel, and a girl who was with me said at once that he was treasuring it because my feet had trodden on it. Such a pretty idea, I thought. Though it turned out afterward he was taking a course of mineralogy—or do I mean geology?—at a technical school. But I liked the idea—and stealing a girl's handkerchief and treasuring it—all those sort of things."

"Awkward if the girl wanted to blow her nose," said the practical Mr. Thesiger.

Lady Coote laid down her woolwork and looked searchingly but kindly at him.

"Come now," she said, "isn't there some nice girl that you fancy? That you'd like to work and make a little home for?"

Jimmy blushed and mumbled.

"I thought you got on very well with one of those girls at Chimneys that time—Vera Daventry."

"Socks?"

"They do call her that," admitted Lady Coote. "I can't think why. It isn't pretty."

"Oh, she's a topper," said Jimmy. "I'd like to meet her again."

"She's coming down to stay with us next week-end."

"Is she?" said Jimmy, trying to infuse a large amount of wistful longing into the two words.

Yes. Would—would you like to come?"

"I would," said Jimmy heartily. "Thanks, ever so much, Lady Coote." And reiterating fervent thanks, he left her.

Sir Oswald presently joined his wife.

"What has that young jackanapes been boring you about?" he demanded. "I can't stand that young fellow."

"He's a dear boy," said Lady Coote. "And so brave. Look how he got wounded last night."

"Yes, messing around where he'd no business to be."

"I think you're very unfair Oswald."

"Never done an honest day's work in his life. A real waster if there ever was one. He'd never get on if he had his way to make in the world."

Bateman's Judgment.

"You must have got your feet damp last night," said Lady Coote. "I hope you won't get pneumonia. Freddie Richards died of it the other day. Dear me, Oswald, it make my blood run cold to think of you wandering about with a dangerous burglar loose in the grounds. He might have shot you. I've asked Mr. Thesiger down for next week-end, by the way."

"Nonsense," said Sir Oswald. "I won't have that young man in my house, do you hear, Maria?"

"Why not?"

"That's my business."

"I'm so sorry, dear," said Lady Coote placidly. "I've asked him now, so it can't be helped. Pick up that ball of pink wool, will you Oswald?"

Sir Oswald complied, his face black as thunder. He looked at his wife and hesitated. Lady Coote was placidly threading her wool needle.

"I particularly don't want Thesiger down next week-end," he said at last. "I've heard a good deal about him from Bateman. He was at school with him."

"What did Mr. Bateman say?"

"He'd no good to say of him. In fact, he warned me very seriously against him."

"He did, did he?" said Lady Coote thoughtfully.

"And I have the highest respect for Bateman's judgment. I've never known him wrong."

"Dear me," said Lady Coote. "What a mess I seem to have made of things. Of course, I should never have asked him if I had known. You should have told me all this before, Oswald. It's too late now."

She began to roll up her work very carefully. Sir Oswarld looked at her, made as if to speak, then shrugged his shoulders. He followed her into the house. Lady Coote, walking ahead, wore a very faint smile on her face. She was fond of her husband, but she was also fond—in a quiet, unobtrusive, wholly womanly manner—of geting her own way.

Mainly About Golf.

"That friend of yours is a nice girl, Bundle," said Lord Caterham.

Loraine had been at Chimneys for nearly a week, and had earned the high opinion of her host—mainly because of the charming readiness she had shown to be instructed in the science of the mashie shot.

Bored by his winter abroad, Lord Caterham had taken up golf. He was an execrable player, and in consequence was profoundly enthusiastic over the game. He spent most of his mornings lofting mashie shots over various shrubs and bushes, or, rather, essaying to loft them, hacking large bits of the velvety turf and generally reducing MacDonald to despair.

"We must lay out a little course," said Lord Caterham, addressing a daisy. "A sporting little course. Now, then, just watch this one, Bundle. Off the right knee, slow back, keep the head still and use the wrists."

The ball, heavily topped, scudded across the lawn and disappeared into the unfathomed depths of a great bank of rhododendrons.

"Curious," said Lord Caterham. "What did I do then, I wonder? As I was saying, Bundle, that friend of yours is a very nice girl. I really think I am inducing her to take quite an interest in the game. She hit some excellent shots this morning—really quite as good as I could do myself."

A Fair Game.

Lord Caterham took another careless swing and removed an immense chunk of turf. MacDonald, who was passing, retrieved it and stamped it firmly back. The look he gave Lord Caterham would have caused any one but an ardent golfer to sink through the earth.

"If MacDonald has been guilty of cruelty to Cootes, which I strongly suspect," said Bundle, "he's being punished now."

"Why should'nt I do as I like in my own garden?" demanded her father. "MacDonald ought to be interested in the way my game is coming on—the Scotch are a great golfing nation."

"You poor old man," said Bundle. "You'll never be a golfer—but, at any rate, it keeps you out of mischief."

"Not at all," said Lord Caterham. "I did the long sixth in five the other day. The pro was very surprised when I told him about it."

"He would be," said Bundle.

"Talking of Cootes, Sir Oswald plays a fair game—a very fair game. Not a pretty style—too stiff. But straight down the middle every time. But curious how the cloven hoof shows—won't give you a 6-inch putt! Makes you putt it in every time. Now I don't like that."

"I suppose he's a man who likes to be sure," said Bundle.

"It's contrary to the spirit of the game," said her father. "And he's not interested in the theory of the thing either.

"Says he just plays for exercise and doesn't bother about style. Now, that secretary chap, Bateman, is quite different. It's the theory interests him. I was slicing badly with my spoon; and he said it all came from too much right arm, and he evolved a very interesting theory. It's all left arm in golf—the left arm is the arm that counts. He says he plays tennis left-handed, but golf with ordinary clubs because there his superiority with the left arm tells."

"And did he play very marvelously?" inquired Bundle.

"No, he didn't," confessed Lord Caterham. "But then he may have been off his game. I see the theory all right and I think there's a lot in it. Ah! Did you see that one, Bundle? Right over the rhododendrons. A perfect shot. Ah! If one could be sure of doing that every time—yes, Tredwell, what is it?"

Tredwell addressed Bundle.

On the Telephone.

"Mr. Thesiger would like to speak to you on the telephone, my lady."

Bundle set off at full speed for the house, yelling, "Loraine, Loraine," as she did so. Loraine joined her just as she was lifting the receiver.

"Hallo, is that you, Jimmy?"

"Hallo. How are you?"

"Very fit, but a bit bored."

"How's Loraine?"

"She's all right. She's here. Do you want to speak to her?"

"In a minute. I've got a lot to say. To begin with, I'm going down to the Cootes for the week-end," he said significantly. "Now, look here, Bundle, you don't know how one gets hold of skeleton keys, do you?"

"Haven't the foggiest. Is it really necessary to take skeleton keys to the Cootes?"

"Well, I had a sort of idea they'd come in handy. You don't know the sort of shop one gets them at?"

A Man You Ought to See....

The Advertising Representative of The Washington Post
Is Not Trying to SELL You Something

He should be considered as a valuable part of your business—seeking to sell things FOR you . . . The Washington Post has a large and responsive circulation. It is the medium in which you can reach a great many families in Washington and in surrounding Virginia and Maryland territories. The cost of space is based squarely upon its result-bringing power. We repeat—"The advertising representative of The Washington Post is not trying to sell you something," he only asks an opportunity to present the facts for the mutual advantage of yourself and Post readers.

See this man! Talk with him. Let him know your business ideals and aspirations. Let him explain the constructive policies of The Washington Post in relation to its readers and its advertisers. He can help you build business volume, decrease overhead charges, increase net profits and render a greater service to your customers. . . Don't buy space in The Post because the solicitor is a "nice fellow" and you like him . . . Buy it because the FACTS conclusively show that a sales message in the columns of The Post is a definite asset and a profitable investment.

Who Pays the Advertising Bill?

Phone National 4205

Just ask, "What can The Post do for my business?" A representative will call and give you FACTS—and leave the rest to your own good judgment.

The merchant doesn't—because quick disposal of merchandise, made possible by intelligent advertising, brings the return of his capital for reinvestment. Numbers of customers reduce the percentage of clerical cost required for each sale, and also lighting, heating, rental and other fixed expenses.

The customer benefits—because advertising provides standards of quality, style and price and permits intelligent, time-saving shopping in the comfort of his own home. By shortening the route between manufacturer and consumer, economies are effected and immediately reflected in lower retail costs.

The first automobile, the first electric refrigerator, the first radio and the first of any modern convenience, all cost more in proportion to value received than does today's counterpart—a benefit to manufacturer, dealer and consumer produced by the power of advertising!

25,000 CHICAGO FANS WELCOME CONFIDENT CUBS

W. Maryland Was Under-Rated

Rout of Maryland at Hands of Tarheels Was Surprise.

West Virginia Eleven Again Disappoints Followers.

By JACK ESPEY.

NOW that Yale, Harvard and Princeton have gotten their cleats soiled, it may be said without fear of contradiction that the 1929 football season really is here. The fans of Washington, however, are impressed with that fact as a result of last Saturday's local developments alone. No outside influence was necessary.

Five games were staged for the entertainment of Capital football lovers and three of them generated interest as great as could be fired by mid-season contests. The Georgetown-Western Maryland clash, in fact, presented a brand of football and a result that are causing as much tongue exercise right now as would be indulged in at a much later date in the season.

Capital fans, particularly Hilltop followers, haven't yet recovered from the shock of Western Maryland's 7-0 victory. Probably neither have the grid bugs and statisticians throughout the country.

The result was surprising chiefly because nobody would take seriously the reports of the Terrors' strength before the game. Had local fans and the football world in general believed that Dick Harlow's club was as smart, powerful and resoureeful as it turned out to be, then Georgetown's defeat would have been accepted with hardly a "Well, whatcha think o' that."

The consensus of opinion among so-called experts along the sidelines was that Georgetown won't meet a stronger team this fall. And it was freely predicted that the Terrors won't drop a single decision.

The Maryland-North Carolina contest brought out a brand of offensive football seldom surpassed in speed and variety and perfect execution in this vicinity. Unfortunately, Maryland wasn't the team that showed it. North Carolina went back to Chapel Hill as the leading contender for Southern Conference honors, at least in the minds of local fans.

Little American University, a 51-0 conqueror of Shenandoah, was in the other game that stands out today in local football discussion. Coach Walter H. Young, the Eagles' new mentor, introduced an exceptionally strong team for one so handicapped by lack of weight. In Orville Targee, formerly a pupil under Young at Chillicothe (Ohio) High School, the Massachusetts Avenue Heights eleven has a real gem of a ball carrier. He scored three touchdowns and played less than half of the game.

Braves Use 20 Players But Lose to Giants, 9-4

Boston, Oct. 6 (A.P.).—The New York Giants closed their National League season here today by defeating the last-place Boston Braves, 9 to 4. Youthful aspirants for major league honors mingled on the diamond with veterans long past their period of active play. Two coaches, Johnny Evers and Hank Gowdy, both entered the fray in the ninth inning for the Braves.

Melvin Ott and Jackson, with two hits, shared the batting honors for the Giants, with Crawford, who knocked in three runs, with two sacrifices and a single.

Cubs Held to 6 Hits; Bow to Pirates, 8 to 3

Chicago, Oct. 6 (A.P.).—Chicago's champion Cubs and Pittsburgh closed the 1929 season today and Pittsburgh took an 8-to-3 decision in a listless game.

Hank Grampp, batting practice pitcher, started for Chicago, but was pounded from the mound in the second when the Pirates scored six runs.

Fred Blake, Hal Carlson and Guy Bush hurled a few innings each, thus eliminating themselves from starting the opening game of the world's series with the Athletics.

Either Malone or Root will face the A's in the first game.

Larry French, a southpaw, held the champions to six hits. The Pirates collected eleven, with L. Waner getting three.

Cards, Outhit, Win From Cincinnati, 2-1

Cincinnati, Oct. 6 (A.P.).—Marvin Gudat, starting his second game of the season for the Reds, held the St. Louis Cardinals to eight hits here today while his mates gathered ten off Frankhouse, but lost the decision, 2 to 1.

The Red Birds, clustering their blows to better advantage than the Reds, the Cardinals took the season's final contest without exertion.

Chisox Take Final From Tigers, 8 to 7

Chicago, Oct. 6 (A.P.).—The White Sox won a last-minute victory from the Tigers, 8 to 7, in the final of the season today. Some spirited swatting at the expense of Ed Walsh, jr., gave the Bengals the lead in their half of the ninth, but the Chicago Team came from behind again to win out in their half of the ninth inning. The Tigers made thirteen blows as against only seven by the Sox.

Red Sox Win Over Nats In Final

Liska Shows Form but Loses, 2 to 1, Before 4,000.

Altrock Makes Single to Bat 1.000 for 2d Season.

By FRANK H. YOUNG.

WASHINGTON'S 1929 baseball season did not end with a victory yesterday, for the Red Sox won, 2 to 1, but the 4,000 or more fans went home perfectly satisfied. The game itself was an interesting pitching duel in which three rookies figured, Adolph Liska going the route for the Nats, with Ed "Bull" Durham and "Purr" Simmons dividing the mound burden for the visitors. Each team garnered but five hits, Boston winning because it clustered a triple and double in the sixth canto when it scored its only run.

It was "Altrock and Schacht day" and these two comedians outdid themselves in their pregame antics, showing practically every "act" in their repertoire. Altrock, however, was not satisfied to merely clown, setting an all-time major league record by cracking out a single in the eighth while pinch-hitting for Sam Rice. This gave him a 1.000 batting average for the second season in his career, for he cracked out a triple in his only time at bat in the last game of the 1925 schedule at Boston. The oldtimer finished out playing right field but had no chances, much to the disguest of the fans.

Rice Gets 200 Hits For Season.

Another record, a personal one, was established by the veteran outfielder, Sam Rice, who was credited with two hits, bringing his total to 200 for the sixth time in his long career.

As to the game, it was close throughout and showed that Manager Walter Johnson may safely count upon Liska as a starting pitcher next season. The subway hurler performed exceptionally well and one inning beat him. "Joe the Greek" Cicero opened the sixth with a triple to deep center and Bill Scarritt immediately scored him with a double. The latter advanced on Bigelow's out and registered after Barnes' catch of Narlesky's sacrifice fly.

This baby rally enabled the Sox to erase a one-run lead which the home gang had gained in the fourth. With one dead, Rice doubled to center, advanced on Barnes' out, and counted when Catcher Connolly pegged to center trying to stop Myer, who had walked, from stealing. This blow of Rice's and another which he obtained in the sixth were the only ones which Durham granted in the half-dozen frames he toiled.

Land Gets Caught Off Third.

Simmons, who started the seventh, was almost as effective, as a hit an inning was the most he granted. The Nationals had a chance in the eighth, however, but lost it due to "Doc" Land's unfamiliarity with the bases on major league diamonds. This rookie, who played center, coaxed a walk with one down and took second on Altrock's record-making single, a clean drive between third and short. On Barnes' hot grasser, Narlesky made a fine stop and forced Altrock at second. Land rounded third too far, for no reason at all, and was an easy double-play victim.

In addition to leading both teams at bat, Rice also turned in the best catch of the game, robbing Bob Reeves of a hit and the Sox of another run by a great back-hand catch of a liner in right center.

With the season over, most of the Nationals will have left Washington by tonight, Manager Johnson, Joe Judge, Sam Rice and Ossie Bluege live here, while Goose Goslin plans to stick around a while. Several started for their homes last night and practically all of the others plan getaways today.

Both Teams Always Supremely Confident; That Much Is Certain About the Series

By SHIRLEY L. POVICH.
(Sports Editor of The Post)

THE OUTSTANDING certainty that presents itself as the world series draws nearer daily—nay, hourly—is that it is all very uncertain, taken by and large.

There are, however, some items which can be enumerated at this time as matters of fact, viz:

The traditional "eye of battle" will find both managers and every man jack of the Athletics and Cubs supremely confident.

Hornsby, Wilson, Stevinson, Cuyler, et al will pulverize the pitching of the left-handed Grove and Walberg should Connie Mack have the temerity to start them, according to Chicago.

Grove and Walberg will handcuff the Cubs with left-handed pitching the National League has never seen, according to Philadelphia.

Simmons, Foxx, Cochrane and their pals will slaughter the slants of Malone, Root, Bush and Carlson, according to Philadelphia.

The Cubs' pitchers will surely stop the slugging of the Athletics, according to Chicago.

The American League is faster than the National, according to Philadelphia.

The Athletics beat out a weak field of rivals, according to Chicago.

Manager Mack wants to win the series as quickly as possible.

Manager McCarthy wants to win four straight games.

The series will not start until Judge Landis slides into position in his box with chin jutted out over the rail and his millennium glare fixed on nothing in particular.

However, both the Cubs and the Athletics have provided much grounds for speculation as to the outcome of the world series when they literally galloped away with the pennants in their respective leagues.

When the Mackmen clinched the flag by a margin of eighteen full games and the Cubs won out by ten and a half full games, it was assured that two powerful clubs would meet in the series, both possessing extraordinary punch at bat and with a fine pitching corps on paper.

The games, however, will be played on grass and the reasoning based on past performances may go very much awry. Especially does the peculiar make-up of the Athletics' pitching staff present room for doubt and uncertainty.

The Cubs' reputation for fondness of left-handed pitching is not without foundation, as 23 victories against 32 southpaws during the past campaign will testify. The left-handed Grove and Walberg comprise two-prise two-thirds of Connie Mack's first line pitching defense, which also includes George Earnshaw, and it is the fate of these two star southpaws that would seem to hold the key to success or failure for the Athletics.

Charlie Grimm is the only left-handed hitter in the Cubs' regular line-up, and he is known to be equally efficient against either orthodox or southpaw pitching. Hornsby, Cuyler, Stevinson and Wilson present a serious problem for even such polished performers as Grove and Walberg, by whom the Athletics swear against any kind of batting.

Although both Grove and Walberg had their difficulties in winning regularly in the waning weks of the season, they have clinched their claims to greatness among southpaws and it is the belief that the National League has not witnessed such clever southpaw flinging that the supporters place their confidence.

In any event, there may be some difficulty encountered in giving credit where credit is due. If the pitching of the opposition is poor, the series might be won by so-called great batting of the winners. If the pitching is good, the so-called weak hitting of the losers may be blamed.

Pilot Ponders Change in Pitching

McCarthy May Start Root in Opener Instead of Malone.

Team's Cocky Spirit Reminiscent of Nats and Cardinals.

By ALAN GOULD,
Associated Press Sports Editor.

CHICAGO, Oct. 6 (A.P.).—The Chicago Cubs, primed to lead the National League out of the world's series wilderness in which it has been wandering somewhat aimlessly for the past two years, came back to the home town today in scrappy, confident mood to wind up the season, receive the welcoming cheers of 25,000 fans, and prepare for the opening interleague battle with the Philadelphia Athletics next Tuesday.

If the Cubs were annoyed by the loss of the last regular season's games to the Pirates at Wrigley Feld or worried in the least by the fact that the A's, even along Michigan avenue, have been installed as world's series favorites, they did not manifest it. In the clubhouse after today's game, from the lean, taciturn Rogers Hornsby to the squat, pugnacious Hack Wilson and the gabby Leo Hartnett, the Chicago players exhibited the cocky, rarin'-to-go sort of spirit that recalled the attitude of such victorious series clubs as the Washington Nationals of 1924 and the St. Louis Cardinals of 1926 under Hornsby.

McCarthy "on the Fence" as to Starting Pitcher.

To justify his assertion that he isn't "worried at all about the outcome of the series," Manager Joe McCarthy came out of a shower bath to greet the eager correspondents, chat about anything they desired and satisfy their curiosity, at least partially, by declaring that his pitching choice for the opening game is narrowed down to a pair of fast-ball right-handers—Charley Root and Pat Malone.

The expectation all along has been that Malone would draw the first game assignment, because of his steadiness and ability as an iron man. It was figured that McCarthy would get maximum results out of the big Irishman by using him at the outset. Tonight, however, although there was no official confirmation of it, the general understanding was that McCarthy had decided definitely to lead off with Root, presumably on the theory that he has returned to his best form. He scored a 1-to-0 shutout in his last full game a week ago.

McCarthy, however, declared:

"I won't decide positively until tomorrow whether it will be Root or Malone. Right now I am on the fence. I think either can win, but I expect to make a definite announcement early tomorrow."

Whitney Colt Rates Above Bobashela

Widener Entry Seen as Stand Out on Monday Card.

Reform, Autumn Bell and the Tartar Are Selected.

By LEONARD W. COLLINS.

DESPITE the fact that but five have been sent out in the overnight nominations for the running of the Autumn Handicap, a test over a mile and an eighth of ground for 3-year-olds and upward, Laurel's washday feature gives every promise of developing into one of the best contested events of the afternoon.

The race not only presages a grueling drive from flag fall to flag finish, but will savor of an intersectional flavor inasmuch as Canada will be represented by the Seagram Stable's Gaffsman; New York by Harry Payne Whitney's Beacon Hill; the Shenandoah Valley of Virginia by the Audley Farm's Bobashela and Princess Tina, while Grey Coat will carry the white and red polka dots of Samuel Ross, the Washington sportsman.

Beacon Hill's only appearance in Maryland this fall was in the Potomac Handicap and had it not been for the fact that he was used up during the early running trying to keep pace with Glen Wild, the Whitney distance performer, might have made a more creditable showing. With that race under his belt and a series of subsequent works, the Broomstick colt shapes up as the best hazard of a rather wide opening event.

FIRST RACE—Five and one-half furlongs; purse, $1,300; for 2-year-old maidens.

Mrs. A. Fairbairn and F. Johnson, Jr., entry.

ARMAGEDDON displayed running qualities in his only start, after a tardy beginning. Students of the sport are agreed that he is just a trifle better than the average juvenile. Saturday he worked three furlongs, around the dogs and over a muddy strip, in :37 2-5, evidence enough that he has speed. HACKY H. is strictly the one to beat. This trick has a second to Swinfield and one to Martis, which recommends him for the place. MUCKER will show improvement. COLLODEN is a picture possibility.

SECOND RACE—About 2 miles; purse, $2,000; steeplechase, claiming; for 4-year-olds and upward.

AUTUMN BELLS is not as sound in the underpinning as he was a few years back. However, tossed into this number with but 134 pounds up, the aging son of Ballot has a royal chance, provided he can dispose of MANTONIAN and BARLEYCORN. MANTONIAN is the figure horse, but class will sometimes tell. BARLEYCORN has gone a long way back, but not so far that he should be out of the money in company of this kind. Of course, anything in a jumping event has a chance.

Mrs. Tyror-W. S. Bosley entry.

THE TARTAR was knocking at the door in his two previous outings, and if the Stefan the Great colt but runs back to either of those two races he should experience little if any difficulty in leading this band home. COMPLICATION'S early speed makes him a contender in a field of this caliber. He will probably be on top as far as he goes. FOUNDATION STONE has not been out in two months, but morning trials have been very satisfactory, the latest of which was a mile through the mire, Saturday, in 1.43 2-5.

FOURTH RACE—Five and one-half furlongs; purse, $1,300; the Gladiola; for 2-year-olds.

Tim Donohue sure does like to name 'em in pairs. Today he has nominated both ALERT and PEACE from the Widener establishment, either of which could win a heat of this kind. From where we sit it looks like Tim is going to get a purse, but a mighty short prize. CURTSEY will find track conditions to her liking and figures to be the contender, although JALNA, if her last outing was of any benefit, may take the track and be hard to head. GREY ABBESS may finish in the dough.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles; the Annapolis handicap; for 3-year-olds and upward.

†Audley Farm entry.

BEACON HILL has nothing to fear in the feature but BOBASHELA. To a man on the fence the Autumn Handicap shapes up as strictly a two-horse affair. However, if Robertson attempts to keep pace with the Audley Farm entrant during the early running, it will not even be a contest, yet he will not dare to permit the son of Ormondale to steal into too long a lead. This is one of those events where jockeyship in the saddle may prove the determining factor. GAFFSMAN has been working promisingly since being shipped to Laurel.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles; purse, $1,300; claiming; for 3-year-olds and upward.

REFORM seems well placed in the sixth. Dropped down into company of this caliber the Ballot gelding will only need a snug ride to be returned the winner. MASTER has rounded to form, but prefers going heavy to show his best form. PELLIGRINO will be running when the others are through. There are any number of other possibilities in the entries that may have a chance. Slickaway's score over the reconverted jumper, Leonardeau, was nothing to enthuse over.

Weather, clear; track, fast.

Uncle Bill Bringloe cut loose with Tuberose, Saturday, but the filly showed unmistakeable signs of needing a race. However, after scanning the railbirds' reports we are inclined to think that the Canadian trainer has a fit horse in FRED PARKER. This hide has worked real well, the latest of which was three-quarters handily in 1:19 2-5 through the mud. BUDDHA is fit and may be the contender, although FAIR BILL, if well meant, might prove dangerous.

COLLYER'S COMMENT on the SPORT of KINGS

BY BERT E. COLLYER

TWENTY-FIVE grand. This is the splendid purse offering in the Gold Cup, 1¼ miles at Hawthorne this afternoon. Overnight, a really high class field is named with DIAVOLO and DISTRACTION, coupled as the Wheatly Entry, a strong favorite. MISSTEP, the sturdy Westerner, if the track remains fast, will go, as also BROWN WISDOM, KARL EITEL and BLACKWOOD. On the face of it, owing to the conditions, weight for age, it would seem DIAVOLO, the generally accredited champion of the year, is favored. This seems decidedly so when one tries to bring him, MISSTEP, KARL EITEL and BLACKWOOD together under equal weights. Just another evidence of the secretary's office, or back office, at Hawthorne being frequently criticized.

If a good cushion remains on the track, or in the event the going turns muddy, it would seem that WATCH ON, which is in rare form at present, is in a snug spot to take down the long end of the second. However, there was a play on HIDDEN THOUGHTS from the Bidwell establishment. Tab the ring action closely, this bird is getting good. GEORGE GROOM was an overnight commission horse and inasmuch as "John" is getting ready to blow it might seem good dope to take heed. In the close dash the "bath" has a sleeper in SCHLAFWOHL. This horse fell heavily last time then ran a fairly good race. Today is the day.

Down at Laurel, the suicide club is again betting on AUTUMN BELLS. This is the gee on which they killed the country last time. This way rigged it will be Katy bar the door. Mantonian, and BARLEY CORN, for what is left. In the sixth, I am going to slip you one of the best things of the meeting. None other than MASTER, a trick that has been whispered about for some time. I have just had a report to the effect "Pittsburgh is loaded to the guards." Now you have the answer to all this gab in your lily white mitt. Ye' wekkum. More anon.

ON VIRGINIA GRIDIRONS

(Associated Press.)

Maury High School, named for Matthew Fontaine Maury, one-time V. M. I. professor, has three stalwarts on the cadet eleven again this year. Capt. Al Hawkins, the team's field general; Louis Chadwick, tackle, and Tommie Scott, end, played together on the high school team in Norfolk before entering the Lexington school in 1926. Now they are playing their fourth year together at V. M. I. A fourth Maury High alumnus, Randolph Gregory, just promoted from freshman ranks, is showing promise on the Cadet varsity squad.

Virginia has two young ends, freshmen last fall, who are giving the three-letter wingmen on the Cavalier squad a chase for their places. John Peyton, of Staunton, and Sam Lee, of Lynchburg, are both big and fast. Lee has a way of snagging passes that has caught the eye of Coach Abell. Dick Turner, Bill Byrd and Bill Paxton, the veteran ends, are being pushed by the youngsters.

Mark Ritter, V. P. I., hails from the place made famous by governors, aviator-explorers and apple blossom festivals. His home in Winchester is only a short distance from the family home of the Byrds, Governor Harry and Commander Dick, U. S. N.

The Virginia Cavaliers are missing Farland Daniel, 210-pound guard who is kept out of uniform with a bad shoulder. Daniel was a fine man in the line when he won his letter in 1927. That winter he was a great heavyweight boxer until the Cavalier ringmen went to meet Navy. Daniel encountered and defeated the Midshipman heavy, but in the bout he loosened his shoulder muscles. He was in uniform just one day this fall before he dislocated his arm again.

V. M. I.'s football letter men are not single-trackers by any means. Eleven of the 14 monogram wearers have been awarded the same insignia in baseball, basket ball, track, boxing or wrestling.

Saturday's Hampden-Sidney-V. P. I. game marked 33 years continuous athletic relations between the two schools. In 1896 the Orange and Maroon played the first grid game against the Garnet and Gray.

TIGERS EVEN BICOUNTY SERIES

Takoma Nine Defeats Bowie Motor Team by 7-4 Score.

LEFTY RAY DAVIDSON got the Takoma Tigers back into the running for the bicounty baseball championship by pitching a well-earned victory yesterday against the Bowie Motor Co. Nine on the Bowie diamond. The final score was 7 to 4.

Davidson, although touched for ten hits, hurled excellent ball. He fanned twelve batsmen and topped his day's work by coming through with a decisive two-base hit that tied the score at 4-all in the seventh, which started his teammates on their victorious way in the last two innings.

Roche hurled for Bowie and did well until the later innings, when he gave up the hits which decided the issue for the Tigers. The game as a whole was a pitcher's affair, with Davidson surviving several storms.

Bowie Starts Scoring in Early Rounds.

Bowie did the most of its heavy scoring in the early innings, when three runs were registered in the third inning and one in the fifth. The Tigers had several chances to score during this period, but blew them when Roche had enough in reserve to stem the tide. The Montgomery County champs finally got to the Bowie pitcher, however, in the fourth, scoring once and twice in the fifth. In the seventh, Davidson's double tied the score, while in the eighth a clean single by Simpson put the Tigers ahead never to be headed.

Navy Coaches Confident Despite Team's Showing

Middies Disappoint in First Two Games but Mentors Hope to Have Team in Top Form for Notre Dame Saturday.

Special to The Washington Post.

ANNAPOLIS, Oct. 6.—Many football players are over the first two hurdles or preliminary skirmishes before tackling their first really big task of the 1929 campaign, the battle with Notre Dame in Baltimore next Saturday. Admittedly the Middies' chances against the Irish do not appear as roseate as they have been pictured. This feeling prevails almost generally here because of the hard time they had in disposing of William and Mary on Saturday.

The plucky fight made by the Southerners against a heavier and more experienced foe which had a greater number of good replacement men to shoot into the fray has been the general comment among local fans. Hence there are many rough spots to be smoothed off to bolster Navy's chance against Rockne's men in Baltimore Stadium. Weaknesses aplenty were noted in the work of the Middies against the Indians. Certain it is that greater precision in execution of plays is needed, as well as better interference for the ball carrier.

Speed Lacking From Navy Back Field.

Except for the brilliant play of Art Spring, speed is also lacking in the back field. There were defects in the charging of the forward wall, and it is an extraordinary thing for a Navy team to get within 5 yards of scoring distance on three or four occasions, to be held for downs. But the Middies were forced to bow to the Indians on just that score.

While disappointed at the showing, the coaches have great faith in their charges and believe they will be at the pinnacle of form for the clash with Norte Dame. Material of the right sort is available, and it is just a question of whipping it into proper shape.

The largest gathering for a football game in the Baltimore Stadium since the Army-Navy contest in 1925 is indicated for the coming battle. Navy has played such teams as Princeton and Michigan, as well as Notre Dame, in the big horseshoe, but in no instance has ticket sales gone beyond the 40,000 mark. The advance sales for the coming game has exceeded all expectations, however, according to Lieut. Comdr. Frederick G. Reinicke, graduate manager of athletics at the Naval Academy.

Notre Dame Back Coach Scouts Navy.

All seats on either side of the field, and that means from goal post to goal post, have been gobbled up. These were sold at $3 each, and a heavy demand for $2 and $1 pasteboards is now on. These are the seats to the side of or behind the goal posts.

Tom Mills, veteran back field coach, at Notre Dame, was a close observer of Navy's work yesterday. He also scouted the game with Denison the previous Saturday. Denison was admittedly a weak foe, but Mills said on general form the Middies were more impressive then than against William and Mary. Unless there is a decided pick-up in the round of practice, Notre Dame will have nothing to worry about, Mills added. The Irish mentor thinks highly of Spring.

TRY-ME ACES WIN SENIOR TITLE

Down Montrose, 14-5 in Capital City League Final.

HAMMERING 21 hits to all sections of the North Ellipse diamond yesterday, the Try-Me Ace Nine took the deciding game of the series to determine the championship team of the Capital City League. The Montrose A. C. Team took a 14-to-5 drubbing from the new champions. The players of the winning team will receive the gold baseballs awarded by The Post.

By hitting the offerings of Payne for the first time this season, the Aces took a big lead in the early rounds and coasted to victory behind the effective pitching of Bennie Spiegel. Payne had faced the Aces on three previous occasions, and on each had turned back the champs with ease. Yesterday he failed to check the bats of a vengeful band of sluggers, led by Singman, Shapiro, Ware and Fisher. The former pair gathered four safeties each, while the other two were satisfied with three apiece.

Games Mark End of 1929 Campaign.

The Aces took an early liking to Payne's slants and counted a pair of tallies in the first round. When three more were added in the third and the score became more one-sided the further the engagement progressed, there was littel doubt as to the ultimate outcome.

About 4,500 persons witnessed the contest, which marked the close of the 1929 campaign for sandlot teams.

CHERRIES DEFEAT BALLSTON

Cherrydale yesterday defeated the Ballston Nine, 11 to 6. MacDonald fanned eight and allowed but seven hits. Six hits, three passes and a couple of sacrifices gave the Cherries eight runs in the third, enough to clinch the verdict.

Eastern-Devitt Grid Game Tops Heavy Schoolboy Card

Eastern vs. Devitt.
Tech vs. St. John's.
Business vs. Gonzaga.
Western vs. Alexandria, at Alexandria.
Emerson vs. St. John's Jr. Varsity.
Woodward vs. George Mason, Ballston.
Langdon vs. Charlotte Hall, at Charlotte Hall.

SATURDAY.
Central vs. Mount Vernon, at Mount Vernon, N. Y.

By WILLIAM F. DISMER, JR.

HIGH school football will again be very much in evidence during the next six days, although as last week, the major portions of the games will fall in Friday. Altogether, nine games are listed for local scholastic elevens, with every high school team seeing action at least once, with Coach Woodworth's Business High Team participating in two games. Four prep schools will also see competition with two of them opposing high school teams.

The Eastern-Devitt game to be played at the Lincoln Park Stadium will, no doubt, hold the spotlight of the Friday games. Eastern's fast-going combination will probably meet its sternest opposition yet, when it faces the prepmen and if it comes through this game successfully, will have reason to be optimistic.

Tech to Tackle St. John's.

"Hap" Hardell's Tech henchmen, who scored a surprise win Friday by upsetting the Episcopal High Eleven, will have an opportunity to prove the game was no fluke when they meet St. John's on Friday. Tech followers were all agog over the announcement of Tech's victory and will watch the next game with a great deal of curiosity before expressing any enthusiasm.

Ty Rauber will take his Central High Eleven on its second trip of the season on the same day, when the Blue and White Eleven entrains for New York to meet the Mount Vernon. Rauber is confident of his men's ability and will endeavor to keep up the fine record started Friday against Forest Park.

A good deal of interest lies in Western's opening game Friday against the Alexandria Eleven. Coach Dan Ahern is rumored to be making a good deal of progress with his team across the creek, regardless of its ineligibilities and the followers of the Red and White Eleven expect their team to make a lot of trouble for its opponents this year.

Business Scheduled For 2 Games.

In an effort to round his inexperienced team into shape, Coach Lynn Woodworth will send his Business High charges into two games during the next six days. The Emerson clash, postponed from Tuesday, will take place tomorrow on the Tidal Basin gridiron and from the records, Emerson should win easily.

However, it was heard last week that Business' second team walked all over Coach Sanborn's men in a brief scrimmage and if the first team can do as well, the Emerson team might be in for a reversal.

But Woodworth's team will be up against it Friday when it tackles the Gonzaga Eleven and he will be doing well if his charges escape unscathed from this affair.

Of the three prep schools playing this week, two will be making their official bow of 1929. Emerson has already played two games but Woodward and Langdon are, as yet, without action. This pair was slated to come together Friday but wet grounds necessitated the cancellation of the game. Woodward will be meeting the George Mason Eleven at Ballston while Coach Gordon Kessler will take his new Langdon team to Charlotte Hall for a game.

HESS NINE WINS.

Coming from behind in the seventh with a three-run rally, the Hess A. C. Nine yesterday won a close 5-to-4 decision over the College Park A. C. Team. Both teams hit hard, but were unable to bunch their hits.

INSECT FLAG TO EASTERN NINE, 1-0

Georgetown Is Victim in Great Battle Before 2,500.

SUCCESSIVE doubles by B. Divver and Schaffner acounted for the single run scored yesterday as the Eastern All-Star Nine defeated the Georgetown Team, 1 to 0, to win the Capital City League insect championship. Some 2,500 fans encircled the West Ellipse diamond to see this sterling exhibition of fine baseball.

The spirited, hard-fought contest marked the climax of a long campaign started last May by these 14-year-old teams. Two weeks ago the regular schedule ended with three teams tied for the championship. Last week the Easterns vanquished the Sam Wests and moved on into the final with Georgetown. Yesterday's victory clinched the chief insect honors for the charges of Coach Lawrence.

Pierce Shades Lomax In Mound Duel.

Brownie Pierce and Ralph Lomax, both left-handers, worked with precision for the rival nines. The former gained a shade of advantage in limiting Georgetown's hitters to two safeties while the victors gleaned eight off of Lomax's slants. But for the two timely doubles in these cond, the contest would probably have gone many extra rounds.

By driving in the winning run, Schaffner shared much of the winning glory with Pierce, B. Divver also came in for a major portion of the glory. Both teams played well afield.

Members of the winning team will receive the gold baseballs awarded by The Post. They will be presented at a meeting of the victorious club on October 15 at the home of Manager Lawrence, 305 Tennessee avenue northeast.

TRADE GENERALLY IS REPORTED GOOD

Conditions in Industry Held Spotty With Motors Still Lagging.

LIGHTER LINES ACTIVE

New York, Oct. 6 (A.P.).—In sharp contrast to the tumbling securities market, business and trade generally maintained an even keel last week. With retail activity somewhat greater than at this time a year ago, conditions in heavy industries remained rather spotty, with some improvement noted.

A notable development of the week was a mild upturn in steel mill activity. U. S. Steel increased its operations from 85½ per cent of capacity to 89 per cent, while the rate for the entire industry was stepped up from 82 to 85 per cent, remaining somewhat below the level of a year ago, when a vigorous acceleration after a quiet summer was under way.

The improvement was due primarily to active buying of railroad equipment, which more than offset a further decline in automotive buying. The immediate outlook, however, remained rather uncertain, with the price structure rather hazy. Further reductions in steel scrap prices were displeasing developments. Farm implement manufacturing was reported as slackening its pace, reducing the requirements from that quarter. A further reduction in U. S. Steel's unfilled orders, as of the end of September, is generally expected. Pig iron production last month set a new high record for that period, but was more than 4 per cent under August.

The automobile manufacturing industry continued to lag, and motor stocks generally sought new low levels for the year on the New York Stock Exchange. Walter P. Chrysler and other leaders in the industry, however, expressed strong disagreement with the speculative attitude toward the motor shares, and remained optimistic regarding future prospects. Production during September is estimated at only 417,000 cars, as compared with 513,000 in August and 436,000 in September of last year. Much of this, however, is attributed to changes in models, and most reports were to the effect that new models were being well received. Nash reported earnings for its third quarter of only half that of the like period a year ago, but the management pointed out that plants were almost completely shut down for six weeks during model changes, and that the new cars were in good demand. The somewhat smaller agricultural purchasing power than was earlier indicated, and public losses in the collapse of the stock market, however, may affect sales.

Radio, furniture, wearing apparel and several other producers of lighter lines continued active in expectation of good holiday trade. Wholesale buying, however, still proceeded somewhat cautiously, and was generally reported as on a level with this time a year ago. Freight car loadings for the latest week were again at a high level, exceeding the like weeks of 1928 and 1927 but not of 1926. Sentiment improved in the tobacco industry, when leading manufacturers increased the prices of cigarettes, indicating that the price-cutting war was at an end. Crude oil production declined a little in the previous week. Nonferrous metal prices were steady and coal was in better demand and firmer prices.

Prices for farm products moved irregularly in comparatively narrow ranges. Storms and frost were reported to have done some damage in a few sections. Wheat prices at Chicago on October 1 were at the lowest level since July 11, December being off about 26 cents from its peak, but prices have stiffened a little since then.

The quarter and month-end credit requirements were met without any severe strain in the money markets. The higher Bank of England rate, however, appeared to be causing the withdrawal of some foreign funds in New York, and indications were for tight money for the rest of the year at least. Craig B. Hazelwood, retiring president of the American Bankers Association, stated at the association's annual convention in San Francisco that rising brokers' loans is causing concern among many conservative bankers, and suggested that bankers act together to protect industry, commerce and agriculture against any scarcity of credit.

The heavy liquidation of stocks is believed to have brought some liquidation of loans late in the week, when call money dropped to 6 per cent and was available in the "outside market" as low as 5½.

ADVICE ON INVESTMENTS

By CHARLES W. STORM

Sheaffer Pen Co.

C. E. J.—Can you give me any information regarding the W. A. Sheaffer Pen Co., also Fokker Aircraft Corporation, and would you consider Budd Wheel Co., of Philadelphia, a good buy?

Answer—Earnings on the common stock of W. A. Sheaffer Pen Co. were equivalent to $6.08 for year ended February 28, 1929, against $5.61 for the corresponding period in 1928. Fokker Aircraft Corporation is one of the leading manufacturing units in the aeroplane field and benefits from close affiliation with General Motors Corporation. On the basis of increased production and large orders on hand, earnings for the full year, 1929, are estimated around $1.50 per common share. The issue appears to be priced amply high on an earning basis. Earnings report for six months ended June 30, 1929, for Budd Wheel Co. were equivalent to $5.20 a share on the common stock. This surpasses earnings for any previous corresponding period in company's history. If this earning rate can be maintained or increased, the stock of the company is not unattractive for long-term holding.

Butte Copper.

P. R. P.—I am holding 200 shares of Butte Copper & Zinc and Ohio & Federal Motor Truck. Would you advise a small loss and reinvestment in Brunswick-Balke Collender and Kolster Radio?

Answer—The issues you are now holding are radical speculations with little to commend them for long-term holding. Brunswick-Balke Collender and Kolster Radio Corporation carry a considerable better rating, but also must be classed as speculative issues, and this column can not predict their future fluctations in price.

Diversification Is Urged.

Mrs. C. H.—For a person having approximately $7,000 savings, no other stocks, bonds, &c., except a small insurance, would you suggest to invest it in other than the savings bank that would be about as safe and would give a higher interest return. Assuming it will be stocks or bonds, please make several suggestions. Also please give me an opinion as to whether I should hold Du Pont common stock which was purchased several years ago.

Answer—Would suggest that you diversify the funds you have available for investment in such high-grade bonds as American Power & Light debenture 6s, 2016; Boston & New York Airline first 4s, 1955; Goodyear Tire & Rubber first and collateral 5s, 1957; Postal Telegraph & Cable Corporation trust 5s, 1952; Western Maryland Railway first 4s, 1952, and International Mercantile Marine first 6s, 1941.

The above are all first-grade bonds and an equal amount of each purchased at curren prices would yield in the neighborhood of 6 per cent. Would suggest that you keep at least $1,000 in the bank for an emergency. Inasmuch as you bought Du Pont common stock several years ago, you evidently purchased for long-term holding, and while this column can not predict its future price fluctuations, there is no reason to advise you to sell.

Standard Brands.

C. R. H.—What information can you give in regard to the new Standard Brands stock; by whom it is sponsored; what are the products, and would it be too speculative for a man of moderate means to invest about $1,000?

Answer—The nucleus of Standard Brands is, of course, Fleischmann. A long established and outstanding company in the field which is supplemented by the old and well known Royal Baking Powder Co., E. W. Gillette, manufacturers of baking powder, and Chase & Sanborn, coffee and tea distributors. Rumors of acquisition of such companies as Gold Dust, White Rock and Kraft-Phenix Cheese, while unsubstantiated as yet, give good evidence that Wall street regards such developments as highly probable. The company is sponsored by the Morgan interests. Earnings of the combined companies to date are not particularly large. It is estimated that they will amount to between $1.50 and $2 for the 1929 year. As a speculative investment the issue has attractive long-term possibilities.

General Laundry Machinery.

E. W. C.—Some time ago I bought a $1,000 General Laundry Machinery 6½ per cent bond. I bought from a reliable broker for 102. Today the bond is quoted on New York Curb at 78. Would you advise selling it?

Answer—The issue you mention is rated "good" by reliable bond authorities and therefore would not advise you to sell. Due to the present high rate of interest in the loan market a great deal of capital which would ordinarily find its way into the bond market has been temporarily diverted into the call money market, which would account in a large degree for the present low price of high-grade bonds.

North American Common.

M. H. D.—What would you advise about selling North American common?

Answer—North American common is very highly regarded in conservative investment quarters and on that account would deem it inadvisable for any one holding it to sell unless there was some good and sufficient reason for so doing. Earnings have shown a material advance, amounting in the twelve months ended June 30, last, to $5.01 a share on the common, as compared with $4.35 a share in the previous fiscal year and $4.51 a share in the calendar year 1928. For the full year 1929 earnings of about $5.25 a share are officially estimated.

Repetti, Inc.

G. W. W.—May I be favored with your advice as to the financial standing of Repetti, Inc., either from the standpoint of long-pull investment or speculation? The same information on Ford Motor, Ltd., would be appreciated.

Answer—Repetti Candy Co., Inc., selling at the present time at approximately $1.50 a share and paying no dividends is a radical speculation and not at all suitable for investment holding. Earnings reports are not available. It has been rumored that a merger would be effected with Loft Candy, which is not necessarily a constructive factor. Ford Motor, Ltd., while having much more merit than the first-named issue, is also classed as a radical speculation, and although long-term holding may prove profitable, none of the fundamental elements of investment exist in the issue at the present time.

BOND MARKET WEEK SHOWS NO CHANGES

Money Rates Are Easier as Demand at End of Month Drops.

INDIVIDUALS BUY MORE

New York, Oct. 6 (A.P.).—Conditions in the bond market remained unchanged during the past week. The sweeping decline in stock prices had its immediate effect on convertibles, of course, some of which made new lows for the movement, but whether the losses in shares would turn investment attention to corporate obligations remained to be seen.

Money rates were easier with the passage of the month-end demands, and time accommodations went back to 9 per cent for all maturities as compared with the 9 to 9¼ charge that had prevailed for about ten days. The time money market continued extremely dull.

Buying of bonds by insurance customers increased and a slight improvement demand by individual investors was also reported, although neither demand was sufficient to stimulate the market. With the floating supply of prime issues reduced to the minimum and with new flotations sharply curtailed, the market is in a position to make a quick response to a resumption of inquiry. It is believed in some quarters that a demand for bonds with liberal yields may be made during the remainder of the year by investment trusts, especially if the stock list is uneasy and call money rates moderately low, in view of the possibilities of appreciation which the trusts may decide exist in fixed-charge obligations in addition to the security afforded. Were such buying to develop, it is pointed out, the benefits to the bond market would be important.

Prices as a whole were easier at the end of the week than at the beginning and the averages for representative industrials, rails and utilities showed about the lowest level for the past four years.

Interest in foreign bonds, where the highest yields are to be found, remained slight, while the market for municipals and United States Government securities barely moved. Liberties and Treasuries, which are excellent barometers of sentiment, shaded off, but only a few issues attracted any attention.

In general, the characteristic of the market is still its thinness, with the familiar wide fluctuations on small turnovers of good bonds, which normally move in very conservative fashion.

New offerings last week totaled $50,823,000, of which $30,000,000 was the Canadian National Railways 5 per cent 40-year loan, 98½. The aggregate of new bond financing in the preceding week was $25,373,000 and in the corresponding period a year ago, $66,713,000.

In each year of their history, the stores as a group have made a profit. The present volume of sales has been built up largely on the deferred or installment payment plan. DENTISTS AND AIDS TO START PARLEYS IN CAPITAL HOTELS

15,000 Delegates and Other Members Assemble for Annual Conclaves.

MEDAL IS AWARDED TO GEORGE EASTMAN

Fireworks Display Tuesday Night at Monument to Be Feature.

Approximately 15,000 delegates and other members of the American Dental Association, which will begin its seventy-first annual convention in the Capital tomorrow, and auxiliary organizations are in the city. In addition to the central conference, group sessions will be held at various hotels during the week. The principal sessions will be held in the Mayflower Hotel and the Washington Auditorium.

Coincident with the opening of the convention, it was announced yesterday that the year's Dental Survey Medal will be awarded to George Eastman, of Rochester, N. Y., photographic pioneer, whose work, in the opinion of the committee, has been the most outstanding in stimulating interest in preventive dentistry. Dental dispensaries have been established by the camera magnate in Rochester, London and Rome.

Citation Praises Eastman.

Wednesday the medal will be accepted on behalf of Eastman by Dr. Harvey J. Burkhart, director of the Rochester Dental Dispensary. The committee's citation reads in part: "Because of the far-reaching effect of his interest in the field of preventive dentistry we feel that the developments during the past year make his contributions of outstanding importance in the field."

Dentists from every State are in the city. Among the subdivisions of the association which will convene here during the week are the American Dental Assistants Association, American Dental Hygienists Association and the Association of American Women Dentists.

A meeting of the House of Delegates, composed of representatives of the membership in each State, will hold its first session today in the Mayflower. Luncheons and social and professional programs will be held during the day.

Guests of Capital Groups.

Officers and delegates of the association will be guests of the District of Columbia Dental Association at the Mayflower at 12:30 o'clock. Visiting women will be guests of the auxiliary of the District dentists at luncheon in the ballroom of the Mayflower.

Outstanding on the program is the clinic display, which will show the rapid advances made in the dental profession in the past year. Studies of different aspects of the dentist's work will be exhibited in the Washington Auditorium. Clinics will be conducted by college professors, State study clubs, foreign representatives, and district men.

Dentists have been delegated to address student bodies of schools in the District on the care of teeth. Prominent among the activities of the association will be a reception at the White House on Wednesday, when the delegates will be received by President Hoover. A ball in honor of the retiring president, Dr. Percy R. Howe, of Boston, will be held Friday night in the Mayflower.

Fireworks Tuesday Night.

The most spectacular feature of the program will be held Tuesday night at the Washington Monument, when a fireworks display will be held. This display was substituted for the midnight frolic. Pyrotechnics will show pictures of President Hoover and officials of the association.

Officers of the association are Dr. Howe, Harry W. Nelson (Minneapolis), Dr. Harry Bear (Richmond), Dr. J. D. Jordan (Little Rock, Ark.), vice presidents; Harry B. Pinney, Chicago, secretary, and R. H. Volland, Iowa City, treasurer.

The Association of American Women Dentists will hold its eighth annual meeting today at the Carlton Hotel. Registration will be held in the hotel in the morning. In the afternoon a business session of the association will be held at the clubhouse of the American Association of University Women, 1634 I street northwest. Following the business sessions election of officers will be held. The conference will end with a banquet at the hotel in the evening.

Officers of Association.

Officers of the association are Dr. Haidee Weeks, New Orleans, president; Dr. Geneva Groth, Philadelphia, vice president; Dr. Wilhelmina Yeretsky, Grand Rapids, Mich., secretary and treasurer.

The American Dental Hygienists Association will meet at the Powhatan Hotel. Business meetings are to be held beginning today and will continue until Thursday. Tours of the city will be made on Friday by the delegates.

Officers of the association are Charlotte K. Sullivan, Philadelphia, president; Cora L. Ueland, Los Angeles, president-elect; Helen B. Smith (South Norwalk, Conn.), Harriet Fitzgerald (Berkeley, Calif.), Mrs. Agnes Bickerton (Honolulu), vice presidents; Agnes G. Morris, Bridgeport, Conn., secretary, and Evelyn M. Gunnarson, New York City, treasurer.

Dental nurses and secretaries in dental offices, composing the American Dental Assistants Association, will hold the fifth annual convention in the Hotel Hamilton. The purpose of the association is to create a profession for the dental nurse similar to that for the medical nurse.

Sessions will be held Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday in the Hamilton. Several prominent dentists will address the gathering. On Wednesday a clinic will be held in the Washington Auditorium, demonstrating the procedure to be used in offices. The annual banquet will be held in the Hotel Hamilton Wednesday night.

Among the speakers will be Representative Frederick N. Zihlman, chairman of the House District committee. Guests of honor will be Dr. R. Boyd Bogle, president-elect, and their coworkers, as well as prominent members of the dental profession from Washington. The delegates will close their sessions Thursday morning with election of officers.

Classes in the Georgetown University School of Dentistry have been postponed for the week to enable the students to attend the sesions of the American Dental Association and to afford them opportunity to visit the clinics. Georgetown will have an exhibit at the convention. Models of dental work by the students will be shown.

Capital Dentists Honored.

Two prominent Washington dentists were honored last night by election to the American College of Dentists, a national organization, membership of which is composed only of men who have won extraordinary distinction in the profession.

They are Dr. C. Willard Camalier and Dr. Allan S. Wolfe. Dr. Camalier is general chairman of the local arrangements committee of the American Dental Association convention. Washington has two other members in the honorary organization. They are Dr. W. N. Simpkins and Dr. W. N. Coogan.

The American College of Dentists has a membership of less than 200. Dr. H. L. Banzaff, of Milwaukee, is president.

Alumni of the school will be entertained by the students. They will be taken on an inspection tour of the new Dental School.

Rumrunners Escape, Using Smoke Screen

Whisky-Laden Auto Is Seized by Pursuing Police, After Chase and Crash of Machine, First With Device Caught in Weeks.

A smoke screen was used at noon yesterday by two white men operating a whisky-laden automobile to escape pursuing police.

The smoke screen, first to be used in some time by liquor runners was only partially successful. While it delayed police pursuit long enough to allow the men to get away when their automobile was wrecked it did not allow them time to salvage ten cases of whisky.

Acting Capt. F. J. Marks and Policemen R. J. Walters and M. M. Deakins of the Eleventh Precinct, together with Sergt. Miskill of the park squad first noticed the liquor-running suspect at Pennsylvania and Minnesota avenues southeast. The police in a car belonging to the Eleventh Precinct gave chase.

The two men in the liquor-bearing machine drove across Pennsylvania avenue bridge to Fourteenth street and north to South Carolina avenue southeast. All this time the smoke was being used effectively, causing the police to drop back to prevent an accident.

At the corner of Fourteenth street and South Carolina avenue southeast, however, the rum-running machine lost a left rear wheel and crashed into the curb. When the police came upon the wrecked machine the men had disappeared. Ten cases of whisky were confiscated.

ATTORNEY ATTACKS ZIONIST MOVEMENT

Jews Blamed for Disorders by F. C. Sakran, Native of Palestine.

PROGRAM HELD DREAM

Blaming Zionist agitators for the recent riots in Palestine, Frank C. Sakran, Washington attorney, vigorously condemned the Zionist movement in addressing the Washington Secular League at the first open forum session of the season yesterday afternoon at Musicians Hall, 1006 E street northwest.

Mr. Sakran, a native of Palestine, made a strong plea for the Arabs in attacking the entire program of Zionism, which seeks the return of Jews to the Holy Land, as a dream impossible of fulfullment. He declared that persistence of the Jewish peoples in the movement will result only in tragic episodes which have "made the land of the Prince of Peace a place of slaughter."

He characterized as "oppressive" measures which he said had been put into practice in Palestine to crowd out or subjugate the Arabs to "the alien Jews." He suggested that if the British government was so solicitous to provide a national home for the Jews that it give some of its territory for that purpose. He claimed the Jewish masses of the world do not want to go to Palestine, that the Zionist scheme is supported only by rich Jews, and that exploitation of the country is at the bottom of the troubles there.

Max Rhoades defended the Zionism movement in answer to Mr. Sakran. Other speakers on the general subject included Judge Lawrence Becker, Mrs. Ethel Murray, Dr. Isaac Peltz, Dr. Joseph Edelman, C. O. Tibbetts, Edwin Evans and Leo Guthman.

TRAFFIC POLICEMAN GOES TO GALLINGER

Martin B. Novotny Becomes Delirious While onDuty at Downtown Post.

VETERAN IS MYSTERY

Martin B. Novotny, 28 years old, a traffic officer, detailed to Fourteenth and G streets northwest, was in Gallinger Hospital last night suffering from a serious mental ailment.

Novotny, it was learned, was stricken Saturday afternoon while directing traffic at the busy intersection. He became delirious and his actions caused considerable excitement among the passing Saturday afternoon crowd.

He was taken to Gallinger Hospital for mental observation after receiving preliminary treatment from Dr. James J. Kilroy, police physician. He was reported to be highly delirious and "disturbed" yesterday at the hospita. Novotny's home address is apartment 48, 23 Second street northeast. He has been on the police force for several years.

The shell-shocked World War veteran who was found wandering around in the Southwest section of the city Saturday, was still suffering from a mental lapse and loss of speech, it was reported last night at Gallinger. It is believed his name is Clarence Gilbert Griffin, as indicated on a card found in his pocket, but his home is unknown. Hospital authorities stated, however, they had learned the man formerly was a patient at Naval Hospital.

Both the traffic officer and the war veteran are under observation in the psychopathic ward.

Plans are under way for a Hallowe'en dance at the Marine barracks. The next regular meeting of the post is scheduled for October 14, when a report on arrangements for the entertainmnet will be submitted.

Clean-Up Urged To Prevent Fires

U. S. Chamber Department Warns That Rubbish Is Source of Blazes.

As rubbish and refuse are sometimes the source of costly fires, a clean-up of the community is urged by the insurance department of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States in connection with the observance of Fire Prevention Week.

Some suggestions prepared by the chamber to eliminate hazardous conditions caused by rubbish follow:

"Combustible waste material should be removed periodically. A safe practice is to provide an incinerator or metal basket for burning such material. Rags and cloths which have been used for polishing furniture and oilling floors are subject to spontaneous ignition if left exposed to the air for a period of time. They should be kept in tightly covered metal containers or else destroyed. Burying of dry leaves will remove a source of fire and at the same time enrich the soil. Ashes should not be kept in wooden containers. A good practice is to keep them in metal cans."

YOUR CITY GOVERNMENT

Answers to Queries From Post Readers on Municipal Matters.

Q. Has a decision of the courts been rendered exempting property owners from taxation for improvements to the streets in front of their
Q. Has a decision of the courts copy. A. G. ZANOFF.

A. No. The Borland law is still in effect. This law provides that abutting property owners shall be assessed one-half of the cost of paving a street. Assessments are levied on front footage. If your property has a frontage of 50 for example, you would be assessed for one-quarter of the cost of laying 50 feet of paving. The property owner on the other side of the street would be charged one-quarter and the city as a whole would pay the remaining half of the total cost.

There have been two decisions by the courts modifying the application of the Borland law. One is known as the Johnson case. The court ruled in this case that, because of resulting inequalities, assessments could not be levied against triangular lots. Corporation Counsel William W. Bride has interpreted a triangular lot to mean a lot with a front footage of not more than 50 feet, or wide enough to permit construction of one house. This interpretation is involved in two cases now pending in the courts.

The other qualifying decision is known as the Knox case. This decision was that assessments may not be levied against property abutting rural roads. The law provides that property owners may not be assessed twice for paving. Mr. Bride has interpreted this to mean that if an owner is assessed for repairs he may not be assessed subsequently for new paving. If charged for new paving he may not be charged for subsequent repairs. You may refer to copies of the aforementioned decisions at Mr. Bride's office in the District Building.

ASSAILANT OF TRIO, HELD AFTER CHASE, NOT POLICE KILLER

Negro, at First Believed to Be "Kid" Lilley, Proves Not Man Wanted.

FLEES UNDER GUNFIRE; BULLET GRAZES BACK

Detective and Patrolman Finally Overpower Him in Brown's Court.

Alexandria police last night definitely established that the colored man arrested yesterday by Washington police and at first believed to be John aGines, alias "Kid" Lilly, alleged slayer of Sergt. Charles L. McClary, Alexandria policeman, is not the notorious desperado.

The man in custody was arrested yesterday by Detective R. J. Barrett and Officer J. L. Oppert, of the Fourth Precinct, after a chase through yards and alleyways in the neighborhood of Browns court southwest, after he had been pointed out to Barrett as the man who assaulted three colored persons earlier in the day at 337 Missouri avenue southwest.

Police immediately began a checkup in an effort to establish his identity, and Capt. W. W. Campbell, of the Alexandira police, last night declared that he was not the long-sought slayer of McClary.

Barrett, who had been searching for the assailant of the colored trio, was accosted by a man in Brown's court who pointed out the prisoner as the one who had made the attack. Barrett was about to alight from his car in front of 128 Brown's court, where the man was sitting, when the quarry drew a gun from his waist. Barrett lunged at him. He turned and fled. Barrett fired two shots, one of which struck the fugitive in the back and glanced off, leaving him uninjured. After a chase through the neighborhood the man sought refuge in the house at 126 Brown's court. Officer Oppert heard the sts, and as the man ran into the house he crashed against the wall. The gun dropped to the steps. The officers overpowered him.

He is being held on an open charge at the Fourth Precinct station, where he gave the name of William Thomas, 38 years old, of 128 Browns court. A colored woman later identified him as a James Turner.

Lena Smith and George Scott, 337 Missouri avenue southwest, who are said to have been attacked earlier in the day, identified him as their asailant.

Scott was on the second floor of the house when the stranger approached and struck him on the head with the butt of a revolver who then menaced Lena Smith. James Price, 335 Missouri avenue southwest, had been attacked earlier. Scott and Price were taken to the Casualty Hospital, where their injuries were treated. They could give no reason for the attack.

Police admitted that there is a strong resemblance between the prisoner and Lilly. Rewards totaling $2,200 now rest on Lilly's head. A reward of $1,200 has been offered by Wilson, N. C., where Lilly is said to have killed a policeman in 1922. Alexandria has offered a reward of $1,000 for his capture in the belief that he slew McClary on June 20 of this year.

Temporary Jobs Open In Bureau of Census

Applications for temporary positions ranging from one to two years in the Bureau of the Census here in connection with the taking of the forthcoming census will be received until November 2 by the Civil Service Commission, according to its announcement yesterday.

The commission, from its headquarters at 1724 F street northwest, said that a large number of appointments are expected to be made. Examinations are to be held for the positions of junior clerk, junior calculating machine operator and junior tabulating machine operator, with entrance salary of $1,440 annually, and under card-punching operator with an entrance salary of $1,260 annually.

LITTLE THEATER

"SECRETS OF NATURE." A silent study of insect, animal and undersea inhabitants. U. F. A. production. Reviewed Sunday night by J. F. Brady.

A galaxy of stars of the undersea, such as probably have never been gathered together in one motion-picture story, unfold in this most interesting, instructive and entertaining series of scenes.

"Secrets of Nature" embraces a number of subjects which have been seen in Washington before, but interwoven with others of like nature and so correlated that they can be viewed again with interest. Probably outstanding in the series is the fight between the cobra and the mongoose, the fight between two fishes, and the actual birth of fish in their native haunts. Scenes of this kind hold the interest, instruct and show to many the great advances the cinema art is making in this undersea photography.

Numbered among the stars in this unique picture are ants, birds, caterpillars, fish of every description, reptiles and a few land animals.

In addition to this feature, another of Robert Florey's impressionistic stories, with kaleidoscopic effect, is shown.

Paramount News and "Happy Landings," a screen story of the making of parachutes at the Curtiss plant, are other features of the program. "The Count," starring Charlie Chaplin in one of his early releases, still has the punch to bring out the laughs. The Little Trio with their music complete the bill.

THE NEW WEEK'S BILLS

COLUMBIA

"HOLLYWOOD REVUE OF 1929." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer all-star talking-singing-dancing production, directed by Charles Reisner, with dialogue by Robert Hopkins and Al Boasberg. Song interpolations by Nacio Herb Brown, Arthur Freed and nine other popular composers. Reviewed Saturday afternoon.

By NELSON B. BELL.

Having produced the first screen musical comedy in "The Broadway Melody," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer now scores another smash hit with the first audible screen entertainment ever executed in true revue form. Since this two-hour, stellar field day is without plot or continuity, a reviewer can do nothing more than chronicle the individual contributions and let the reader decide whether he wishes to miss a picture of the most diversified content some of us have ever seen.

It may be remarked, first, that many, no doubt, will be disappointed that William Haines, the screen's premier cutup, has only one brief "bit" with Jack Benny; that Buster Keaton's Salome dance is as short as it is and that Marion Davies did not combine some of her inimitable impersonations with her completely surprising interval of dance.

At the very outset, "The Hollywood Revue" strikes a novel note by presenting a living main title, which soon dissolves to reveal a minstrel opening in which Jack Benny is introduced as master of ceremonies and, in turn, introduces Conrad Nagel as interlocutor. Trick photography adds greatly to the wallop of this scene upon which Charlie King and Cliff (Ukulele Ike) Edwards are quick to appear. After a bit of wise-cracking, Joan Crawford sings "I Gotta Feeling For You," supported by the Biltmore Trio when she goes into her dance. During a brief reversion to the minstrel setting an unidentified young woman sings a broken rhythm song tantalizingly while another does a jazz toe dance that paves the way for more clowning by Messrs. Nagel, King and Edwards that ends with Charlie King singing "Your Mother and My Mother," one of the hits of the show, and Conrad Nagel astonishing the customers by singing "You Were Meant For Me" to Anita Page in excellent voice.

Then the too-brief comedy bit between Mr. Haines and Mr. Benny and Bessie Love's entrance out of Mr. Benny's inside coat pocket. She sings "I Never Knew I Could Do a Thing Like That," does a dance and then is tossed all over the place by the male chorus for a rousing hit. Marie Dressler and Polly Moran next, the former singing "I Am the Queen," with ensemble background—very funny. Laurel and Hardy are burlesque magicians, aided by Mr. Benny; Marion Davies stops the show with her "Tommy Atkins" number—more trick photography—and the three Brox sisters make their first appearance to lead a corking military ensemble, on a grand staircase, that proves how well trained the Albertina Rasch girls are.

The "Tableau of Jewels" is a sheer bit of spectacle, with interpolated dances, that leads to Buster Keaton's one appearance as the most bizarre Salome dancer ever seen.

Gus Edwards transforms his song, "Lon Chaney Will Get You If You Don't Watch Out," into an interval of music-drama, assisted by the feminine chorus and a group of typical Chaney characters. After Natcha Nattova and her three male associates have done the "Coatis, Vestis and Pantis" adagio described by Mr. Benny, Norma Shearer and John Gilbert offer two natural color versions of the balcony scene from "Romeo and Juliet," directed by Lionel Barrymore. Cliff Edwards sings the wow hit of the revue, "Singing in the Rain," which is taken up by the Brox Sisters, the Rounders and ensemble in what appears to be real rain on a magnificent setting.

The Brox sisters next do their song specialty, followed by Cliff Edwards, Charlie King and Gus Edwards in "I'm Charlie, I'm Ike, I'm Gus" and "The Italian Trio," in turn succeeded by Marie Dressler, Bessie Love and Polly Moran in a burlesque of the same and preceding numbers. Travesty de luxe.

These six thereupon panic the house with "While Strolling Through the Park One Day" and Mr. Benny then introduces Cliff Edwards in "Nobody But You," backgrounded by the dancing ensemble. Benny then attempts to render "Your Mother and My Mother" on the violin but is himself rendered hors de combat by George K. Arthur and Karl Dane.

In a natural color scene of entrancing beauty, Charlie King sings "Orange Blossom Time" and the Albertina Rasch ballet executes one of the most delightful dances of all, notable for a series of extraordinary photographic effects. The "Singing in the Rain" finale is an enormous effect that permits the introduction of the entire company.

This sketchy chronology does not take into account the constant flow of badinage, the orchestral accompaniment or the scenic innovations of a picture that is the only one of its kind.

The Metrotone News and orchestra prelude are the only auxiliaries.

METROPOLITAN

"THE GOLD DIGGERS OF BROADWAY." A Warner Bros. Vitaphone Technicolor adaptation by Robert Lord of Avery Hopwood's "The Gold Diggers." featuring Winnie Lightner, Conway Tearle and Nancy Welford. Directed by Roy Del Ruth. Reviewed Saturday evening (third week) by W. A. Whitney.

It becomes incumbent upon this reviewer to add his few feeble words of commendation to the reams and reams that have already been said in its praise.

Not that adverse criticism can not be leveled with justification upon this picture, for it can; yet it possesses so many of the elements of good theater and good entertainment that the occasional blurriness of the film and the interpolation of extraneous revue scenes are just naturally taken in and absorbed along with the rest.

To enumerate merely the names of the excellent cast and the most outstanding portions of the picture would take more space than is available in the entire motion-picture section of this authoritative morning journal.

Winnie Lightner and her "Mechanical Man" Albert Gran, in their comedy performances are outstanding, but no more so than William Bakewell and Helen Foster, as the youthful lovers; Conway Tearle and Nancy Welford, as "mature" lovers; Ann Pennington's few but red hot numbers; Nick Lucas's melodious crooning of "Tiptoeing Through the Tulips," "In a Kitchenette" and "Painting the Clouds With Sunshine" even though dragged in at times by their heels; and the Lilyan Tashman-Gertrude Short high-low brow comedy "gags."

A word of caution, however, should be given to the prospective auditor: see the picture from the beginning if possible. It is only in this way that the full effect of the howlingly ludicrous lines may be completely appreciated.

Releases of the Fox News, featuring Premier MacDonald's triumphal entry into New York, and the Pathe Sound News and a Vitaphone medley of the song hits from the "Gold Diggers," as an interlude, fill out the remaining fifteen minutes.

FOX

"THEY HAD TO SEE PARIS." Fox all-talking picture, starring Will Rogers, supported by Irene Rich, Fifi Dorsay and Marguerite Churchill. Adapted from Owen Davis' play based on story by Homer Croy. Directed by Frank Borzage. Reviewed Sunday afternoon.

Maudlin as I was as a result of a midnight preview of this droll drama of nouveau riche Oklahomans in that gay Paree, subjected to the acid test of audience reaction I find it to be even a better picture than I had thought. Here, it seems safe to say, is marked the rebirth of Will Rogers as an audible screen star of the first rank. Whether that is true or not, he at least is currently rolling capacity crowds in the softly carpeted aisles of the Fox Theater by the penetrating wit that drops from his lips in an almost uninterrupted flow of his own peculiarly individual style or satire.

As has been previously pointed out in these columns, "They Had to See Paris" is of a piece with "The Man From Home," the Booth Tarkington-Harry Leon Wilson play in which William Hodge starred for many seasons. It unmasks the hypocrisy of a lamentably large number of Americans, teaches a great lesson in patriotism and pride of country and is rich in good, hard, American common sense. As Pike Peters, the garage owner who overnight became an oil millionaire, Will Rogers surpasses anything he has ever before contributed to the theater. The role, of course, is ideally fitted to those droll capabilities with which he is most generously endowed.

Throughout the course of the adventures that befall the Peters family in Paris—the mother intent on marrying their daughter to a title, the son mapping out his own career with an artist's model in the Latin Quarter and Dad alone remaining in possession of his balance wheel—the spectator chuckles, laughs, roars and explodes!

While the major credit for the picture's laughability rests upon the perfectly timed performance given by the star, he is, nevertheless, splendidly supported. Irene Rich has never conceived a better balanced or more deftly drawn bit of portraiture than she brings to the eye and ear in the role of "Idy" Peters, Pike's ambitious wife. Marguerite Churchill, as the daughter who decided that the marquis was not so hot after she had learned that he was trying to sell his title to her father for a large number of dollars, is natural and vivacious, and Ivan Lebedeff is suave and polished as her impecunious suitor. A particularly effective portrayal is that of the Russian Grand Duke Maikall, a regular guy at heart, by Theodore Lodi. He shares with Rogers several of the funniest scenes in the play. Another, Fifi Dorsay's Parisian cabaret artiste. Owen Davis, jr., as Ross Peters, seems to me a trifle too juvenile. Many others lend their talents to less important assignments.

On the stage the Fanchon and Marco "Songs I Love" Revue, although it utilizes a musical background of old favorite melodies, is primarily a carnival of dance. Spectacularly staged, it employs the agile talents of John and Harriet Griffith, tangoists par excellence; Huff and Hunt, Don and Rita and John Roper and Loma Ruth, whose individual contributions I am unable to identify. Mel Klee, blackface monologist, is, as usual, sure-fire; the Sunkist Beauties seem to be quite that, and John Irving Fisher, still hoarse, scores his customary hit in a too-brief pianologue.

The Fox Movietone News and the orchestral rendition of Massenet's "Phedre" overture, under the baton of Leon Brusiloff, add appropriate embellishment to an exceptional bill.

RIALTO

"PARIS BOUND." Pathe talking picture, from the play by Philip Barry, starring Ann Harding, supported by Fredric March. Directed by Edward H. Griffith. Reviewed Saturday night by C. Ransom.

Here is civilized entertainment of the first order. For intelligent dialogue, thoughtful and significant motive, and superlative acting, this picture at least equals, and seems in the enthusiasm of the moment to surpass, any previous film of the talkative type. "Paris Bound" is the screen's nearest reach to the heights of finished comedy, rarely attained by the stage itself. The credit belongs largely to Philip Barry, whose structure and lines evidently have been closely followed. The piece falls short chiefly at those points where the director has gone afield.

But the amazing treasure trove of the occasion is Ann Harding herself. This is understood to be her first appearance in a film, though she is well known to the stage. There is no more exquisite personality in either field, and it would be hard to name three women who are able to combine beauty with such easy and subtly intelligent playing. Possibly she has too much delicacy and restraint ever to be crowned queen of the movies. It is not easy to picture her in any wild emotional abandon, and her present character does not call for such indignities. Nevertheless, she has a charm that might have swept her to popularity even in the silent regime. With her rich voice and mastery of diction to boot, she will not fail to reach sovereign rank in the talkies.

Miss Harding has the part of a young wife with theories about marriage. She believes both partners should be free to continue their companionship with former friends, and she also holds to the "marital holiday" doctrine. Her husband's business trips to Paris bring about a situation that puts her notions severely to the test. She yields for a time to the traditional jealous reactions, but in the end, finding herself only human, she rises equal to her own ideals.

Fredric March, a fine young actor who was seen here a week or two ago with Jeanne Eagels in "Jealousy," plays the husband. The other man and woman who make up the quadrangle are admirably cast, and the several minor characters are well above the ordinary standard. The speeches are pointed and pungent as well as richly humorous, and at the same time they are what reasonably intelligent people on an intimate footing would really say to each other, and they are spoken in the way that such people would really speak them. That is what makes glory.

There is a musical interlude that is not very successful. The young wife sits dreaming while her musical lover plays the ballet that she has been helping him to compose. It is not the kind of thing this type of girl would take pleasure in dreaming about. The music might be more impressive on a rehearing.

Other items on the program are a short comedy that is fair in spots, an Oswald the Rabbit cartoon with noises, and excellent news pictures.

Rummage Sale Is Planned.

The National Review Woman's Benefit Association will hold a rummage sale Wednesday at 1433 P street northwest. The Liberty Union Review will be hostess the same day at luncheon in the clubhouse, 1750 Massachusetts avenue northwest.

EARLE

"FAST COMPANY." Paramount all-talking picture, adapted from the play, "Elmer the Great," by Ring Lardner and George M. Cohen, with Jack Oakie, Skeets Gallagher, Evelyn Brent and Gwen Lee featured. Directed by A. Edward Sutherland. Reviewed Saturday night.

If timeliness has anything to do with a picture's box-office success, this breezy picturization of Ring Lardner's comedy of baseball should pack them in throughout the week just as it was doing at the performance I attended Saturday night. With the world series starting tomorrow, the one in Mr. Lardner's kindly travesty takes on added interest to the fans whose attendance is restricted to the scoreboards. However, it should be made clear at the outset that in or out of season, "Fast Company" would be a swell bit of fun, packed to the top with laughs.

Jack Oakie, as the bush leaguer who makes the New York Yankees and proceeds to break up ball games with his bat, demonstrates that he is quite an actor, entirely capable of creating and sustaining a characterization that is amusing, convincing and of considerable dramatic substance. He is an unconscionable braggart, but when the test comes it is developed that he strangely possesses both a brain and a heart. When the show girl who has kidded him into a slump just before the crucial game of the world series with Pittsburgh, realizes the kid's real worth she supplies the impetus that breaks up the pastiming with a home gun that brings the Yanks home on the long end of a 2-to-1 score.

Evelyn Brent, as Betty Corey, half of a vaudeville sister act, is a trifle colder and more staccato, it seems to me, than the role demands, but Gwen Lee, as her partner, is spontaneous, flip and not so dumb as "Skeets" Gallagher, playing the Yankee scout, would make her appear. The three of them, Miss Lee and the Messrs. Oakie and Gallagher, aided by Mr. Lardner's crisp lines, furnish enough laughs to make hits of two or three ordinary camera comedies.

Others in the cast who perform valuable services include Chester Conklin, without the walrus mustache; Arthur Housman, Eugenie Besserer and Sam Hardy, cast as manager of the Yankees. The baseball scenes, incidentally, are particularly well done. They were obviously taken in a modern plant on a big day and afford all of the excitement and all of the commotions usually encountered when the game is close and the fans, as well as the players, are on edge.

The surrounding bill is one of notable excellence. Three diversified Vitaphone short subjects are presented—Rudy Vallee and his "Connecticut Yankees" in "Honey," "You're Just Another Memory," and "You'll Do It Some Day, Why Not Now?" Ann Codee and Frank Orth in a comedy skit, "Music Hath Charms," and Eddie Green and Company in "Sending a Wire," a Negro comedy sketch that diverted me the least of the three.

The newsreel is interesting, and the Earle Orchestra, under the direction of Daniel Breeskin, offers the fifth of its "International" overtures, "Gypsyland," comprised of a group of familiar melodies, during the rendition of which Romeo Guaraldi, tenor, sings the "Pagan Love Song," and Herbert's "Little Gypsy Sweetheart," from the pit, and Ida V. Clarke plays a "hot" number and "Tiptoe Through the Tulips" on the piano accordeon from the organ console—all to prodigious applause. N. B. B.

PALACE

"HIS GLORIOUS NIGHT." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer all-talking picture, directed by Lionel Barrymore, from Willard Mack's adaptation of the play "Olympia," by Ferenc Molnar. John Gilbert starred, supported by Catherine Dale Owen and Nance O'Neil. Reviewed Saturday night by Mary Porter Russell.

John Gilbert has found his voice, and the first words he utters in his new all-talking film are characteristically these: "Princess, my princess, I love you, love you." There follow then some five minutes of increasingly arduous protestations, punctuated by the kind of business which has made the great lover famous. So torrid is the effect of his combined words and caresses that the conviction comes for a moment that Mr. Gilbert is caricaturing Mr. Gilbert. The episode passes, however, and in the succeeding scenes he stands revealed as the same dashing Jack of pre-Ina Claire and pretalking days, with rather better use of his vocal organs than the average silent player turned audible.

More important than the star's talking debut is the fact that Director Barrymore has transferred to the screen a Molnar play so refreshingly different from the several standard studio plots that it could contain many more than the present number of defects and still deserve grateful acceptance. The story of a haughty princess and a cavalry officer of lowly birth, of her scornful dismissal of his suit because she "believed in the inequality of men," works itself into a cleverly manipulated revenge on his part, made possible through a royal sense of values that is presented with delightful satire.

The force of the film's close has been diminished greatly by a tagged-on reconciliation. The logical ending comes, as it did on the stage, with the princess, head still high in her humiliation, asking in a strained voice when and where they will meet again and standing, incapable of further overtures, as the triumphant captain answers in suddenly gentle tones, "Never and nowhere, my princess," and leaves her to brood on what might have been.

The foreign resort atmosphere has been carefully worked out, though the camera dwells at disturbing length upon types of guests, such as the American mother and daughter, played by Hedda Hopper and Doris Hill, who are concerned in no way with the development of the plot.

Catherine Dale Owen does splendidly with the difficult role of the princess, and Gustav von Seffertitz contributes one of his excellent character bits as the head of the district police. The rich comedy depths in the character of the princess' mother, the outstanding role as interpreted on the stage, are not completely sounded by Nance O'Neil, though she brings to the part moments of sincerity of her own making. Much of the original dialogue has been retained intact.

The stage revue, calling itself "Jazz Clock Store," brings to the fore a comedian in the person of Bob La Salle, with three irresistibly funny numbers, including a rendition of the "Wedding Bell Blues." The Tiffany Twins and Jim Rentch dance and Paul Kirkland introduces some acrobatic and juggling tricks that are entertaining. Bard and Avon sing pleasingly in a spectacular group offering, in which the Fred Evans dancing chorus appears to advantage, after which Al Evans and the Palace Syncopators entrench themselves still further in the good graces of the citizenry by a skillfully blended medley of popular tunes.

The newsreels and an orchestral prelude under the direction of Harry Borjes comprise the subsidiaries.

TRACTION MERGER COMES UP TODAY IN UTILITY HEARING

Companies Fight Inquiry as Harmful to Their Fare Plea.

THEY WOULD AVOID DELAY ON DECISION

Economies on Unified Operations Are Admitted by Companies.

Hearings on the petition of the street car companies for a ten-cent cash fare with four tokens for 30 cents enter their second phase today when hearings are resumed before the Public Utilities Commission at 10 o'clock this morning with the question of merger under consideration.

How productive the discussion of merger for purpose of the record of the case may be is problematical inasmuch as both the Capital Traction and the Washington Railway & Electric Cos. have declared their determination to insist that the merger may not properly be made a part of the fare case.

Admission in Record.

The commission, on the other hand, has forced into the record of the hearings admissions by company officers that material savings are possible by means of rerouting and unified operations. Inas much as reduction in operating expenses would have the same net result as higher fares, in that the companies would have available a larger amount for return on their valuation, the commission has insisted that merger is a subject which properly belongs in the fare proceedings.

John H. Hanna, president of the Capital Traction Co., has told the commission that he would be willing to discuss the question of merger, but insists that the commission has no authority to delay its decision on the question of higher fares because of consideration of the question of merger.

Ham Silent On Question.

William F. Ham, president of the Washington Railway & Electric Co., has declined to discuss the merger at all in connection with the present fare proceedings, declaring that to do so would be futile, inasmuch as no one can forecast what would be the outcome even if a merger agreement was arrived at by the companies. That agreement would have to be approved by the commission, and after that by Congress before it could become effective, the companies contend.

There is no authority in law for the inevitable delay which would result, the companies declare, contending that they have sh
